AWAIT HOOVER YES OR NO ON TAX INCREASE

Smoot Comes Out for Higher Rate.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Continuation of this year's reduced tax rates in 1931 today hung in the balance.

President Hoover made it known that prospective expenditures may exceed revenues by a "comparatively small percentage," but that as there have been surpluses for many years, the treasury can stand a small deficit "without disturbing the stability of the government at all."

While nothing was disclosed as to the President's state of mind regarding income taxes it seemed still possible that he may recommend to congress next month continuation of this year's rates, which in the absence of further legislation will lapse.

Smoot Favors Increase.

If the President determines to favor the lower tax rates he will be going counter to the advice of Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the senate finance committee, who upon his return to Washington today asserted that the treasury cannot possibly stand another year of the present rates. Senators Smoot and David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.], who yesterday took a diametrical position, are believed to reflect the opinion of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The President must reach a definite decision during the next week or ten days both his annual message to congress and his annual budget message will be in the hands of the printer within less than two weeks.

Last Word was Aug. 22.

There seems ground for the belief that Mr. Hoover will urge legislation to continue this year's income tax rates, despite the admitted fact that the financial situation of the government is somewhat worse now than on Aug. 22, when he announced his hope that such a recommendation could be made.

The President's statement on Aug. 22 was made after reports inspired by treasury officials had appeared in the newspapers that the threatened deficit would make continuation of the reduced tax rates impossible.

"I have reviewed the present fiscal situation with Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Mills," said the President at that time, "and I can state that there is no ground now for the predictions in the press this morning (Aug. 22) that a deficit was impending which would prevent continuation of tax reductions established last year."

Mellon Follows Suit.

Secretary Mellon on the same day issued a similar statement.

"It is altogether too early to make any definite statements," he said. "While no one can definitely promise at this time that the 1 per cent tax reduction granted at the last session of congress can be maintained during the calendar year 1931, I can say that after a careful review of such figures as are available at this time I have very real hope that we may be able to make such a recommendation to congress in December."

Those who insist that the President will regard it as essential that tax rates shall not be increased at this time point to the fact that the treasury estimates of revenues have invariably ignored debt payments from foreign nations, which heretofore have been used for retirement of the debt. Secretary Mellon some months ago, during the consideration of veterans' legislation, forecast a deficit of 180 million dollars for the present fiscal year if the reduced tax rates remain effective.

Balanced by Debt Interest.

It is estimated that the interest portion of the foreign debt payments, which can be used for current expenditures if paid in cash, as expected will amount to about 135 millions during this fiscal year, or more than enough to wipe out the threatened deficit. Increased expenditures for veterans and further increases in prospect for public works have upset the situation then existing, but there also have been reductions as a result of an economy drive.

Even though there should be a deficit of 200 millions or more after using interest payments from foreign nations, it is pointed out that this could be absorbed easily by increased borrowings in the quarterly short term financing of the treasury. This plan is advocated by Representative Will R. Wood [Rep., Ind.], chairman of the house appropriations committee.

Senator Smoot was emphatic in declaring that a continuation of this year's tax rates is not feasible.

"I do not see how we can possibly retain the lower rates, and if I have anything to say about it we will allow them to lapse," he said.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—[Saturday.]—Lady Alexandra Metcalfe, younger sister of Lady Cynthia Mosley, gave birth to twins yesterday at her home in London. Mother and children are doing well.

Lady Cynthia, speaking at a dinner of British advertisers last night, apologized for not having a speech ready.

"I left myself free today to make a perfectly charming and witty response," she explained, "but, unfortunately, my sister went and had twins."

Lady Alexandra is the younger daughter of the late Lord Curzon and his first wife, Mary Leiter of Chicago.

His body fell in a mass of flame in sight of 10,000 persons who had gathered to see the Emerson and Horace Mann elevens settle the city championship. Cafe Drinkers (Male) Facing Arrest in East

Newark, N. J., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—War on consumers as well as against sellers of liquor was declared today by Lewis J. Tutt, new prohibition administrator for New Jersey.

Tutt issued directions to all prohibition agents in his jurisdiction to arrest all male patrons of speakeasies and other places where liquor was sold.

There was no explanation in the order of why women patrons, if there were any, were exempted.

The dry chief told his agents to arrest all men found with liquor in front of them or drinking, and to demand $500 bail for their appearance as offenders or as material witnesses against the proprietors or managers of places in which they were found.

All men sitting at a table on which there was liquor in bottles or glasses were to be taken into custody for questioning, Tutt instructed his subordinates.

Get 'Em All, He Orders.

"Do not let the number of those found in any place you visit affect the number of those you take into custody," he said. "If the local police cannot supply enough patrol wagons or other vehicles for their transfer to police station or the federal courtrooms, commandeer buses and taxicabs."

When Mr. Tutt was appointed acting deputy prohibition administrator for the New Jersey district Oct. 3 by Prohibition Director Woodcock he succeeded Alexander McPhee. The latter had been in the office since July and was the eighteenth man tried out on the job by the federal enforcement authorities. McPhee was transferred to be assistant superintendent of alcohol permits in Philadelphia.

Mr. Tutt has been in the prohibition service since 1924 as an agent in the District of Columbia and Maryland districts. Woodcock comes from the latter area.

Once Under Charges.

Mr. Tutt once was under charges of having caused the death of one Smiley, a suspected bootlegger, who was hit over the head with the butt of a shotgun in a raid led by Tutt.

The jury trying the case decided that Smiley's death was due to broken ribs caused by a fall from a truck and not from the skull injury he received.

Rob Wholesale Jewelers of $200,000 Worth of Gems

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 14.—(AP)—A robber held up the M. Reingold company, wholesale jewelers on West 5th street, in the financial district, today, escaping with unset diamonds believed to total $200,000 in value.

POSTAL CLERKS FIND DISCOURAGING FOLKS DISCOURAGING WORK

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—(AP)—It was a discouraging day at many a parcels post window.

Third Assistant Postmaster General Tilton had just issued a general order, "Addressing of parcels on more than one side to be discouraged."

Parcels post clerks stopped all who came bearing two faced packages.

"Madam," or "Sir," they explained, "whereas you thought to aid us by writing an address on each side, you have instead delayed us. The dual address requires checking and double checking on postage, special handling, special delivery, insured, and C. O. D. indorsements."

By the time one explanation was ended it was usually time to start another, for about every fourth person brought a doubly addressed package.

Looking ahead at the Christmas rush, one parcels poster sighed deeply.

"This discouraging business is a rather discouraging business," he said.

'MAXIE' EISEN'S BROTHER FOUND SHOT IN AUTO

Jack Eisen, 30 years old, of 1215 Macedonia street, brother of Max Eisen, notorious west side hoodlum, was found shot in the head at 1 a. m. today in his automobile at Hoyne avenue and Thomas street.

Sergt. John Crimmins and his squad from the West North avenue station took him to St. Mary's hospital, where his wound was dressed, and he was then taken to the Bridewell hospital. Surgeons said that he probably would recover.

Eisen was reluctant to talk to police about the shooting, insisting that it was done by two holdup men who had approached the car and opened fire when he hesitated in raising his hands. Police, however, said that the shot was fired from the inside of the car. He has been arrested frequently in connection with gang shootings.

Kills Self When Home of 34 Years Is to Be Sold

For 34 years John Nelson lived at 8521 Mackinaw avenue. To that house he returned daily from his work at the Illinois Steel company. There he and his wife, Tilly, reared their son and daughter. The house is to be sold today. Already Mrs. Nelson and their son and daughter had gone to their new residence at 9208 Exchange avenue. Nelson remained to take care of the place. Last night they found him dead, a bullet in his heart. A brief note in Swedish explained that he couldn't bear to see the old home go. He was 71 years old.

3 CHLOROFORM BANDITS WORK IN LOOP HOTEL

Bind, Drug Victim to Seize Jewels.

Three bandits who gained entrance to a room in the Hotel Sherman last night by calling their victim by name through the door, robbed Jack Salter, New York diamond merchant, of $80,000 worth of unset gems and left him bound and gagged and unconscious from chloroform which they administered by strapping a saturated handkerchief over his nose and mouth.

Salter, who is in business with his father, Norbert Salter, diamond broker at 48 West 48th street, New York City, told police he had been calling on dealers in the loop all day as a salesman and returned to his hotel room on the 16th floor shortly before 5 p. m.

Meets Gunman at Door.

A few minutes later there was a knock at the door and a voice said: "Is that you, Jack?" Thinking it might be a dealer, Salter opened the door to face a stranger with a drawn gun. He was followed by two other men.

Cautioning him against making an outcry the men produced a rope and an auger with which they bored holes through the foot of the bed. Then they bound him in a chair, passing the line around the back of the chair and through the bed. Then they administered the chloroform.

Salter said that that was the last he remembered until he awakened at 7:30 and began to shout for help.

Guests Smell Chloroform.

Earlier H. J. Wellman, house detective, had received complaints of chloroform odor in the hall, but he had been unable to find the source.

O. F. Erricson, 2431 Eastwood drive, and John R. Dickey, 10900 Prospect avenue, who were visiting a friend in room 1552 on the floor below, were the first to hear Salter's cries and called a bell captain, who opened the door with a pass key.

Salter said that he had started to clean the diamonds in a bowl of alcohol when the robbers appeared. Part of the gems were in a wallet on the table and another in a second wallet in a brief case with the watches, which the robbers ignored.

Carries $50,000 Insurance.

The victim said that $60,000 worth of the gems belonged to his firm and they were insured for $50,000. The other $20,000 belonged to another merchant and he was carrying them on memorandum receipt.

Salter said he would be able to identify two of the men, who were about 30 years old. All three wore silk gloves. Sergts. Guy Willoughby and Roy Kindt of the Central police were questioning Salter at a late hour last night.

Salter's relatives in New York said last night that his father is in Holland and that he looks after the buying, while his son does the selling for the firm. Jack Salter said last night that in ten years on the road as a diamond salesman this was his first loss from robbers.

TWO ROBBERS SLAIN

Two robbers, one a middle aged bandit, the other a young burglar, were shot and killed resisting arrest in two separate encounters last night and late yesterday afternoon. Both were slain with police shotguns, one held in the hands of a patrolman, the other in the hands of a bystander who went to the aid of a policeman.

The slain lawbreakers were Joseph Sylvester, 44 years old, 1022 South

DO-X Spends Night on Sea Off France

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The largest flying boat in the world, the German DO-X, bobbed tonight on a calm sea between the fortified island of Re and the city of La Rochelle, interrupted after a trying day in which it left England for Bordeaux on another phase of its projected flight to the United States.

Late tonight the huge ship reached that point and threw out anchor after traveling on the surface along the coastline for 50 or more miles. There it awaited, comfortably, the coming of daylight. The passengers remained aboard.

Four Motors Go Bad.

When the DO-X made the French coast en route from England this afternoon some of her 12 engines began to work badly and she lost speed, requiring two hours to fly from Cherbourg to Ushant and 20 minutes from there to Douarnenez. The DO-X held her course, however, until she reached Les Barges, a small coastal point near Sables d'Olonne. By that time four motors were giving trouble.

It was 5:50 p. m., night was falling fast, and a dense sea mist was creeping over the waters. At the speed which the plane was flying the DO-X could not hope to reach Bordeaux until late at night and the flight would have been attended by a certain risk in the darkness and fog.

Decides to Taxi on Water.

Hence the captain decided to taxi along the coast for a way, since the ship could make a respectable speed on the surface.

The big plane came down to the surface just off Les Barges and skimmed down the coast, the drone of her engines heard by people ashore, but her lights invisible through the mist and darkness, to a point between the island of Re and the city of La Rochelle.

Resume Flight Today.

After the seaplane had anchored boats took off from the city in answer to signals from the plane and took three members of the crew to St. Nazaire de Charente, where they made arrangements to ship 500 gallons of gasoline and 25 of oil as early as possible in the morning. The DO-X will take off for Bordeaux after receiving these supplies.

This morning, when the big ship left Calshot air station in England, several false starts were made before it could be lifted from the water. This was caused partly by a heavy fog which veiled the coast and even prevented some of the passengers from reaching Calshot in time. Three persons were left behind. The DO-X took off with only 24 persons aboard.

GHOST IN ARMOR FLOATING IN AIR HALTS ORCHESTRA

LONDON, Nov. 15.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—The Daily Express said this morning that a ghostly apparition of a man in armor floating above the heads of the dancers in the Covent Garden Opera house last night brought the music to an abrupt halt while the conductor, Herman Darewski, sank into a chair and dropped his baton.

The paper quoted Darewski as saying he noticed the drummer had stopped playing and was staring with eyes of horror across the hall. Darewski, looking for the cause, saw a helmeted and armed figure resembling Wagner's Siegfried, he said. It was moving slowly through the air across the arena, he added, and it so shocked and unnerved him that he collapsed in a chair.

The band stopped playing and the amazed dancers flocked toward the conductor, thinking he was ill. The ghost vanished, the paper said.

Some members of the band were credited by the paper with seeing the figure, but apparently none of the dancers noticed it. Darewski said he feared the apparition was an omen of disaster.

MONTHLY 'TAKE' OF $30,000 TOLD AT GUZIK TRIAL

The trial of Jack Guzik, public enemy, in Federal Judge Woodward's court yesterday presented the spectacle of a Capone gambler "putting his finger" on the big shots of his gang, as well as disclosing the enormous profits of the gambling enterprises of the syndicate.

The gambler, Fred Ries, not only pointed out Guzik, who is charged with evading $200,000 in income taxes on an alleged income of more than $1,000,000 for three years, but also named Al Capone, Ralph Capone, and Frank Nitti as his bosses.

Pictures Circulating Game.

Ries told how the gambling houses run by Guzik in Cicero would receive frequent "orders to move," and how another place would be waiting a few doors or a few blocks away. He named the stands of the circulating "house" as the Ship, 2127 South Cicero avenue; the Subway, 4738 West 22d street; Lauderbach's, 12th street and 45th court; the Radio, in the 4500 block on West 22d street; the Garage, 50th avenue and 27th street; the Odd Fellows hall, 55th avenue and 25th street; and "the store room" in the Western hotel building.

Ries explained that during 1927 and 1928 he worked for Guzik as general cashier, in charge of all the money for the horse race betting, the blackjack, chuck-a-luck, roulette, and craps tables. The three years during which the government charges Guzik evaded income tax payments were 1927, 1928, and 1929. Ries was questioned by Assistant United States Attorney Dwight H. Green.

Questioned About Profits.

Q.—What was the average monthly net profit of a gambling house? A.—About $25,000 or $30,000, when business was good.

Q.—Did you ever know one of the houses to lose money? A.—I would say no.

Q.—What did you do with the profits? A.—I bought cashiers' checks with them and gave them to Bobbie Barton [Guzik's chauffeur], as I had been told to do.

Ries then identified cashiers' checks totaling $149,000 purchased from the Pinkert State bank of Cicero. The checks had previously been traced to Guzik's account in the Equitable Trust company.

Ries testified that 35 to 40 men were employed in a gambling house at a time, including the manager, the cashier, floor men, payoff men, and porters. He said he paid the operating expenses of the house and paid the help out of the profits before buying cashiers' checks for Guzik. A bank roll of $10,000 was kept in reserve to cover possible losses, he said.

Witness Points Out Guzik.

"Do you know the defendant, Guzik?" Prosecutor Green asked.

"I do," Ries answered, pointing him out.

Q.—How long have you known Guzik? A.—Early in 1927 I went to work for him as cashier of a gambling house.

Q.—How long did you work as cashier? A.—Until late in 1928 when Frank Ryan became the manager.

Q.—Had you been in the gambling business before? A.—I went to work

HELP YOURSELF BY BUYING NORMALLY

The effects of economy are cumulative. People are able to buy what you have to sell because they are able to sell their own product. When you curtail your buying you are cutting down the income of some tailor, shoemaker, or store clerk. Like as not these same persons are the ones who buy your product, or some part of it.

It's a perfectly simple proposition. The way any man can help his own business is to resume buying on a normal scale, and to preach among his friends the necessity of doing the selfsame thing. Better business is coming, but will come sooner if those whose incomes are sustained realize it is to their own best interest to resume normal buying.

ARE YOU DOING YOUR PART TO BRING BACK PROSPERITY?

Chicago Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

for Jimmy Mondi in February or March, 1927. Shortly after that Guzik took over the place and I continued with him.

Q.—Who was the manager before Frank Ryan? A.—Pete Penovitch. [Penovitch was a witness in the income tax trial of Ralph Capone.]

Q.—Who was the boss? A.—Well, Guzik, but I understood Al Brown, Ralph Brown, and Frank Nitti were bosses.

Q.—By Al Brown and Ralph Brown do you mean Al Capone and Ralph Capone? A.—Yes.

Cross-Examined by Waugh.

Ries, a middle-aged man, bald and wearing horn rimmed glasses, was responsive enough as a government witness, but on cross-examination by Defense Counsel William F. Waugh, his thin lips contracted and his face became as expressionless as the sole of a shoe. He couldn't remember dates and amounts.

He said, however, that a man named "Tennessee" once won $10,000 in a dice game and that when a horse named Candy Rock won at $192 to $1, the house lost about $20,000. On both these occasions they had to send for money, he said.

Ries at first denied and then admitted that he had worked for Guzik in a gambling house at 2835 North Clark street. He said this establishment lost "about $15,000 or $20,000," and that it had to close after a bombing. He said he worked about two weeks at 78 West Madison street, but denied that he ever worked at 111 North Dearborn street.

The witness testified that $18,000 was stolen from the safe of one of the Cicero gambling houses, including $6,000 in cashiers' checks.

"Whom did you report to?" asked Attorney Waugh. "Ralph Brown," was the reply.

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I stopped payment on the checks at the bank. Ralph Brown and I signed the indemnity bond the bank made us put up to get the money.

The Kennel Club Profits.

Guzik's $28,000 profits from 105 shares of stock in the Hawthorne Kennel club, Capone dog track, during 1929, were brought out by Dr. David B. Omens, physician, who held the stock. Dr. Omens testified that Guzik asked him to take over the stock because of the newspaper publicity being given the dog tracks.

Dr. Omens testified that he received a dividend of $21,000 on Sept. 4, 1929, and that he gave this to Guzik at the Lexington hotel. Guzik returned $1,000 to pay income taxes on the stock, he said. Of the second dividend —$11,500—Guzik returned $500 for income taxes, and of the third dividend of $5,500 Guzik returned $250, Dr. Omens said.

The $5,500 dividend check bore the indorsement of Dr. Omens, that of John Patton, once known as the boy mayor of Burnham, and finally that of Guzik. Dr. Omens testified that he paid income taxes on these dividends and that J. Charles Granata, an accountant for the Hawthorne Kennel club and a brother of Congressman Elect Peter C. Granata, helped him make out the return.

Records Admitted as Evidence.

The government introduced Dr. Omens' returns, showing that Guzik saved $1,500 by transferring the stock due to the higher surtax brackets on the basis of his income. This, it is charged, was fraudulent. Judge Woodward admitted the records over objections after the prosecutors pointed out the $1,500 discrepancy.

The short, pudgy faced Guzik continued to manifest interest in the proceedings yesterday, gazing intently at each witness and frequently examining checks and other records.

In the corridor during a recess Guzik commented to Clarence Converse of the special intelligence unit of the treasury department on "the quiet, orderly trial." "The only rough stuff is shown by the government," he said.

There have been reports of threats against the lives of witnesses and the government is taking precautions.

Court was adjourned until 9:30 this morning when the government will introduce two or three witnesses and then rest its case.

DEFENSE POSES FUR SAMMONS AS UNION WORKMAN

He Faces New Charge After Vagrancy Trial.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The state made out a splendid case against James (Fur) Sammons yesterday on robbery with a gun, but the trouble is he is not on trial for that. He was legally discharged in that case five years ago, and it only came up incidentally in the great test vagrancy trial before Judge Edgar A. Jonas.

The vagrancy trial was adjourned until Monday after the state had rested and the defense had begun its testimony. The Sammons defense against vagrancy is that he is an electrical worker and carries a union card. He has worked on several jobs during the periods that he has been out of prison or jail, but during the last few months has not been able to get a job. Nevertheless, his union card is paid up until Dec. 31, and he was able to subscribe $10 to the fund to aid the unemployed of his union, which numbers about 900.

Lyle Issues New Warrants.

Even if the state fails in this case, the searching of records made necessary by the nature of the evidence has already begun to bear fruit and Sammons seems to be in for a lot more "pushing around." Warrants charging burglary against him, William (Klondike) O'Donnell, John Barry, and George Davis were issued by Judge John H. Lyle yesterday. They are based on the raid on the Morand Bros. warehouse in 1927, when whisky was siphoned through a garden hose into kegs in an adjoining cottage. Sammons served his time in an 18 month sentence for this at Leavenworth prison, but he and the other defendants were never prosecuted by the state.

Oscar A. Naylor, an insurance man who lives at the Parkway hotel, was called by the state to tell what happened to him on May 11, 1925.

"I was held up on Franklin boulevard, near Sacramento, about 10 o'clock a. m.," he said. "There was one man, and two others were in a car."

Points to Sammons.

Q.—Do you know who held you up? A.—I recognize the man here, but probably would not have recognized him on the street.

Q.—Where is he? A.—Sitting there [the witness identified Sammons at the table with his lawyers].

Q.—What did he do? A.—That is the man that held me up with a gun. He took away a brief case from the back of my car.

Q.—Did you see the brief case again? A.—I saw it at the 47th street police station two or three hours later.

Q.—Did you see the defendant again? A.—I saw him at the station and two or three times later at the Grand Crossing station.

The witness said he never got his brief case back and went to court several times, but the case never came to trial.

Q.—Didn't you tell the judge you were not sure of the man? A.—I do not recall. I had to go away and I don't know what happened in the case.

The records show that Sammons was discharged. Whether this case can also be reinstated is a matter that the state's attorney is looking into. Normally, the statute of limitations in such a case is three years.

When Sammons was arrested on Oct. 2 last on the vagrancy warrant he told Policeman Michael J. Phelan that he lived at 6112 South Richmond street and had worked for the White Way Electric Sign and Service company, 1935 Larrabee street, for three months. He said he was 48 years old and single. At the detective bureau he made the same statement, but refused to give any previous employment. He said his boss at the electric works was "Mr. Flannery."

Denies Sammons Was Employé.

The state produced John Terry, office manager and bookkeeper for the White Way company, who said that Sammons had never worked there to his knowledge.

The defense countered this by producing Thomas J. O'Brien, secretary of the Electrical Workers' union, No. 134, showing that Sammons was a paid-up member in good standing. Two union cards were put in evidence. Also William Heathman, 8019 Ellis avenue, testified that in 1924 Sammons had worked with him for several months on an electrical job.

Lieut. Edward P. Bermingham of the detective bureau told of the capture of Sammons and others at the Morand warehouse, 816 South May street. The bars of a window had been cut, he said, and whisky was being pumped out of government barrels into a cottage adjoining, where Sammons was caught. Two revolvers were found near the windows. He said that Sammons gave the name of John Nolan, 6612 South Richmond street, and said he was an electrician.

STATE TESTS PISTOL TO PROVE BELL FIRED FATAL SHOTS IN CAFE

Col. Calvin Goddard, ballistic expert, and his staff are working hurriedly, it was disclosed yesterday, to complete tests within the next few days so that expert testimony will be available in Judge Joseph Sabath's Criminal court as to whether Frank H. Bell or Richard Sullivan shot and killed Christ Patras, manager of the Villa Ricca café, 2572 North Clark street.

The ballistic tests must be speeded because the state is about to close its murder case against Bell and Sullivan.

A revolver found within Bell's reach when he was arrested some months ago in an apartment at 1214 North Paulina street, was discovered in the police files Thursday. The revolver had been missing and Assistant State's Attorneys Walker Butler, Ross Lee Laird and James McShane conducted a secret search for it.

Prosecutor Butler during the session of court yesterday indicated that the state is going to change its attitude and contend that Bell is the man who fired the shots rather than Sullivan.

ATTACK REPORT ON EVANSTON SUNDAY SHOWS

Objections were filed by both sides in the Evanston Sunday movie controversy at a hearing yesterday before Circuit Judge Sullivan on the report of Master in Chancery George E. Gorman. The master's report approves Sunday movies. The city council recently declared against them, although in a referendum Evanston favored the Sunday shows by a majority of 56.

Corporation Counsel William Lister objected on the grounds that golf courses in Evanston are closed on Sunday, whereas the master's report held that movies should be permitted on Sundays because golf is. Attorneys for the theater interests objected to the report because it stated the ordinance prohibiting the movies was "good" but that it was opposed by vote of the people. They declared the ordinance should have been declared discriminatory.

The question will be settled at a hearing before Judge Sullivan next Tuesday.

JURY TO PROBE SUDDEN END OF POLICE CLEANUP

Transfer of Shoemaker's Squad Under Scrutiny.

Capt. William Shoemaker, one time chief of detectives, is expected to be one of the first witnesses called before the grand jury next week, when, it is reported, the jurors will open a general investigation of the police department. This bit of information leaked from the closely guarded grand jury quarters yesterday. The first session of the inquiry is expected to be held on Monday.

Four policemen working out of the Warren avenue station on vice and gambling, who are described by Capt. Shoemaker, until recently their superior, as "four of the hardest working and most efficient men on the force," were transferred to outlying districts recently in a general order issued by Acting Commissioner Alcock.

Will Investigate Transfer.

The reason for this transfer is to be one of the first matters taken up by J. Fred McGuire, real estate dealer who is foreman of the grand jury, according to reports yesterday.

The grand jurors, it was learned, obtained a fund of information relative to police department matters in a letter received by Foreman McGuire. The letter, although unsigned, was apparently written by some member of the department, it was said.

The informant described the Warren avenue transfer as due to the activities of the four policemen in making at least two raids a day. The men transferred are Arthur Wachholz, who was sent to Morgan Park; John Payton, to Austin; Robert Bennett, to Grand Crossing, and Herman Steinberg, to Chicago Lawn.

Slot Machine Cases Recalled.

Three of the men, Wachholz, Payton and Bennett, worked for many months with Capt. Shoemaker under the supervision of Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers on the slot machine syndicate cases which resulted in the indictment of six police captains and twenty-one politicians, officials and hoodlums.

The conspiracy charges were subsequently dropped because the state's star witness, David Rockola, refused to go through with his testimony as a prosecution witness. He was sentenced to jail for contempt of court following his change of attitude.

The six captains named in the slot machine cases are still members of the police department. This is another matter which the jurors will go into, it is reported, to find out why civil service charges were not made against the men.

Shoemaker Starts Cleanup.

When Capt. Shoemaker finished his work with the prosecutor's office he went to take charge of the Warren avenue district. He took with him the men who had aided him in the slot machine inquiry. He made these three men into a vice and gambling squad and added Steinberg, who before going to the Warren avenue district worked on vice and gambling under former Deputy Commissioner Ira McDowell. The four were instructed to clean up the Warren avenue district, known for years as a district infested with vice and gambling resorts.

For about a month the squad cleaned up saloons and gambling and vice resorts. At least two raids a day was the program and prisoners were taken into the Des Plaines street court. The activity of the squad ceased as suddenly as it began when the transfer order scattered the men to outlying districts. The order was not requested by Capt. Shoemaker, it is reported.

Wachholz, a plain clothes detective for years and always one of Capt. Shoemaker's mainstays, is now in uniform helping school children across a dangerous intersection in the Morgan Park district.

"I thought the cleanup orders were in earnest," he said yesterday.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who has been selected by the grand jury to conduct the police investigation because of his reputation for fearlessness, had all the information relative to the Warren avenue transfers in his possession yesterday. He refused to discuss the impending investigation, but it was reported that Capt. Shoemaker and the transferred squad members will be among the first witnesses.

DAVID REDUCES MADDOX BOND; ASKS JURY QUIZ

Judge Joseph B. David of the Criminal court yesterday ordered a grand jury investigation into the actions of Police Magistrate George F. Lee of Maywood in fixing a $100,000 cash bond for Claude Maddox, gang leader, who is charged with an attempt to kill a policeman. The judge reduced the Maddox bond to $10,000.

"This Justice Lee can never have read the constitution or the bill of rights," Judge David declared. "And he is doubtless unaware of the Supreme court decisions concerning proper bonds. I hope his actions can be attributed to ignorance and not to deliberate violation of the constitution."

Calls in Grand Jury.

The judge then summoned the 23 members of the grand jury before him and acquainted them with the facts in the Maddox case.

"I think you gentlemen should investigate this case," the judge said. "There is a statute governing oppression and malfeasance in office. It is an indictable offense with a $10,000 fine and removal from office as a penalty."

Foreman J. Fred McGuire said the grand jury would make a thorough investigation of the facts in the case.

During the course of the hearing, Judge David referred to the vagrancy drive against hoodlums as "a lot of ballyhoo."

"There is a poisonous virus spreading through some of the officials in this city which is attacking the structure of our government," he declared. "These petty ways of attempting to stop crime in this town can do nothing but harm. The state's attorney is refusing to cooperate with the judges in really effective ways of getting rid of the criminals."

These remarks were occasioned when the judge first suggested that the simplest way to bring Maddox to trial was to indict him before the grand jury. He added the suggestion that another means of trying the case quickly would be an immediate hearing in the Criminal court with himself sitting as a committing magistrate.

Turned Down by State.

Both these suggestions were turned down by Assistant State's Attorney Edward D. Markham, who declared the state was not ready for trial. He stated that he preferred to have Maddox arraigned before Justice Lee on the date set, Nov. 22.

"So you'd rather have the case tried before an ignorant j. p. than before a judge who knows something about the law?" queried the judge. "Then you're not really enthusiastic about prosecuting gangsters."

Prosecutor Markham explained that to transfer the case from Justice Lee to another court would perhaps offend the justice of the peace. He added that he was engaged in the trial of many cases before Justice Lee.

The Maddox case came before Judge David on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus presented by Attorney Milton J. Smith. The lawyer claimed that the $100,000 cash bond or $200,000 real estate bond demanded by Justice Lee was grossly excessive and intended merely to keep Maddox in jail.

Gives Warning to Justice.

"I for one am sick and tired of this sort of procedure," remarked the judge. "This justice of the peace had better be careful or he will face an indictment for oppression in office. Doesn't he know any law?"

"He knows some law," insisted Prosecutor Markham.

"Well, I don't suppose you could expect a justice of the peace to know any law," remarked the court. "And I can't see why the state's attorney wants to try the case before such a man."

"The victim of the attack, Policeman James McBride, is still in the hospital," said Prosecutor Markham. "He can't testify."

"I'll sacrifice my time and go to the hospital and hold court," returned the judge. "If he identifies Maddox as his assailant I'll hold him to the grand jury immediately."

"No, we don't want to do that," insisted Markham. "We're not ready yet."

Rio Released by Lyle.

Frank Rio, Capone lieutenant and gunman, was released yesterday by Judge John H. Lyle, who sentenced him Thursday to six months in jail for contempt of court. Rio was sentenced because he cursed Bailiff Gordon Townsend when the latter insisted that he parade in the bullpen before sightseers.

Judge Lyle had announced that he would vacate the sentence if Rio apologized to the bailiff, but the gangster did not apologize. He merely smiled as Judge Lyle declared the matter was too petty for such a sentence. Bailiff Townsend remarked that Attorney Miles J. Devine, representing Rio, was a friend of his and Rio went free.

John J. Maloney, 32 years old, 1843 South Kennilworth avenue, Berwyn, was held to the grand jury on charges of embezzlement of $40,000 of the funds of Gorrell & Co., investment brokers, for whom he was cashier.

Assistant State's Attorney George Lavin was criticized by Judge Lyle for prosecuting Daniel Agos, a real estate broker, and Dr. Blaine Ramsey, on charges of conspiracy and confidence game. The two are accused of taking $2,500 given them to effect the release from the house of correction of Mrs. Sarah Goldstein, a pickpocket.

Prosecutor Lavin said he would take the case directly before the grand jury if Judge Lyle discharged Dr. Ramsey. The case was continued until Nov. 18.

SAYS CLARA BOW AID "CONFESSES" THEFT OF $35,000

Miss Devoe and Actress May Face Jury.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 14.—[Special.]—District Attorney Buron Fitts said today that Miss Daisy Devoe, former secretary of Clara Bow, had made a thirty page "confession of the theft of $35,000 of Miss Bow's money and property."

The alleged confession was thus related by Mr. Fitts:

"The matter came into the district attorney's office in the nature of a formal request for a criminal complaint against Miss Devoe, charging the embezzlement of money and property belonging to Miss Bow. It was regularly referred t Mr. Blayney Matthews, chief of the bureau of investigation. After several days he reported back that Miss Devoe had made a detailed confession of the theft of some $35,000 of Miss Bow's money and property, a great deal of which was found in her possession. The investigation was completed today and this office has no alternative under the law but to place the matter before the county grand jury."

Both to Go Before Grand Jury.

The district attorney announced tonight that he would "send both Miss Bow and Miss Devoe before the grand jury next Tuesday."

Fitts was closeted with Nathan Friedman, attorney for Miss Devoe earlier in the day. Friedman asserted he would file a lawsuit on Daisy's behalf, directed against the district attorney and two of his investigators, seeking to force return of valuables claimed by Miss Devoe. The valuables were taken, Friedman asserted when Investigator Matthews and Policewoman Marjorie Fairchild forced Miss Devoe to open her safety box.

"Will Welcome Inquiry."

Miss Devoe said: "I will welcome a grand jury investigation. I never made any confession at the district attorney's office. There was a stenographer present, but I made no confession. Matthews asked me a lot of questions and the questions I didn't answer he answered himself. I want my side of it heard by the grand jury."

WILL TRANSFER LAND TODAY TO COMPLETE UNKINKING OF RIVER

The delivery today of more than 100 parcels of real estate, valued at $13,930,000, to the railroads involved in the river straightening project and to the city by the Foreman-State Trust and Savings bank, the trustee, will mark the legal completion of the improvement. Representatives of the city and of the railroads will appear at the bank this morning to consummate the deal.

Upon delivery of the deeds the railroads and the city will pay to the trustee a total of $4,668,668.54. Of this amount the trustee will pay out $4,117,808 to redeem the trustee's outstanding "B" certificates. The balance will be used by the city in payment to the railroad for track removals and construction work still to be done.

In order to make workable the plan provided for in the river straightening ordinance of 1926 it was necessary that the railroads, whose lands were involved in the project, convey their property valued at approximately $5,000,000 to a trustee while the new channel was being excavated and the abandoned one filled.

FATHERS OUT OF JOBS STEAL FOR THEIR CHILDREN

Two fathers, unemployed and desperate, sat in the Sheffield avenue station early this morning, willing, as they expressed it, "to go over the road." They were captured late last night while about to undertake a burglary for shoes and underclothing for their children.

The fathers were John Toland, 27 years old, 801 East 51st street, an accountant, and Earl Harter, 25, 703 Belmont avenue. Together they had made petty raids on groceries, markets, and dry goods stores—for their families, they said. Only necessaries were stolen. Toland is father of one child, Harter of three.

Both were seized on the roof of the building at 759 Wrightwood avenue by Detectives William Hoban, Michael Carraci, Emil Boettcher, and Ellsworth Erickson. Harter pressed his hand to his coat pocket, in which was a revolver. The men were questioned by Lieut. Axel Jensen and confessed. Harter declared he was desperate from lack of work and money with winter coming on and no clothes for the children. Toland's story was the same.

St. Paul Man Who Shot Self in Night Club Dies

Bruce Todd, 28 years old, son of a wealthy St. Paul, Minn., lawyer and insurance official, who shot himself through the head in the Teodoro Gaiety Night club at 710 Rush street on Oct. 28, died early this morning in Passavant hospital. Although his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kay Todd, hurried to Chicago by airplane, they were unable to aid police in ascertaining a motive for the suicide. The club is operated by Mrs. Mary Esposito, widow of "Diamond Joe" Esposito.

THREE CUSTOMS GUARDS GIVEN RUM SENTENCES

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Three United States customs border patrolmen, indicted in connection with a widespread smuggling conspiracy on the Canadian border, were sentenced here today to Atlanta federal prison.

Those sentenced were Weldon J. Cheatham, one year and eight months, and fined $2,000; Colin J. Morris, one year and a day; Charles E. Coolican, one year and two months.

Francis L. Coveney, the fourth patrolman indicted, pleaded guilty today and was to be sentenced later.

Italy Sentences 10 Reds, Including Yank, to Prison

ROME, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Ten communists were setenced to from two to twelve years' imprisonment after conviction today on charges of trying to reorganize the communist party in Italy. The prisoners were tried before a special tribunal for defense of the state. Antonio Perrotta, a 24 year old stucco worker, who got a five year sentence, was born in Boston, Mass., but now is a resident of Rome.

START INQUIRY INTO DEATH.

The coroner's office yesterday began an investigation of the death Thursday of Byron Wixsom, 70 years old, who was found asphyxiated in his room at 2136 Warren boulevard.

Gang Machine Gun Nest Found Opposite Home of Aiello Aids

An abandoned machine gun nest at 2150 North Racine avenue, apparently manned by Capone gangsters to eliminate at least one and perhaps four suspected Aiello-Moran followers, was under secret police surveillance last night.

The nest was discovered by Hudson avenue police Tuesday following information given by a woman, whose name is being withheld. Since then a 24 hour detail of three detectives has kept watch, hoping to capture the gangsters. The police have kept their vigil so secret that none of the building tenants has been aware of their presence.

Everything Carefully Prepared.

Everything in the isolated ambush nest indicated careful arrangements and preparations for a long stay. Cans of food, some empty, were lying in a cupboard. Bread and other articles were on the table. On the floor were telltale marks of two tripods of machine guns. It was a complete arrangement, except for a fatal blunder which sent the would-be assassins in flight and brought the police.

This blunder was the dropping of two machine guns on the stairs leading to the third floor nest. The unusual sound attracted the attention of the woman whose name is being withheld. She opened the door of her apartment, saw the weapons being shoved hastily beneath the coats of two of three men. That was Monday night.

Believe Targets Known.

The identity of the intended targets of the machine gunners is not known. But the probable identity is known. The telltale tripod marks of the guns indicate the weapons were leveled at the entrance of 2151 North Racine avenue, directly across the street. That is the address of Sam Catalano and his brothers, Dominic, Tony and Philip, alleged Aiello henchmen.

About a week ago two men, apparently Sicilians, rented the vacant third floor apartment of 2150 North Racine avenue. Just for a month, they told the landlord. They paid a deposit. The following day they returned. One or two confederates, also Sicilians, were with them. They carried several chairs and a few bundles, light furnishings. Monday night three men walked slowly up the stairs, carefully lugging two burdensome objects. They passed the first landing and were half way up to the second when they blundered. They dropped the objects.

Woman Tells Her Story.

It was then the woman looked out of her door. She became alarmed, and the next morning confided what she had seen to a retired police sergeant. He urged her to notify authorities, and she told her story to Capt. Thomas Condon of the Hudson avenue station. The room appeared similar to other gun nests, particularly those from which Joe Aiello, north side gang chief, was slain several weeks ago.

On the floor was a newspaper, dated Nov. 7, the banner line telling of the raid by police on the Rogers Park apartment of Terry Druggan. The story had been torn out. The article had told of rumors that Druggan had negotiated for the slaying in Florida of Al Capone.

Police Guard Maintained.

Capt. Condon immediately assigned three plainclothes men to guard the nest. Each day and night the guard has been maintained in eight hour shifts. Police refuse to discuss the case.

It is believed, however, that Sam Catalano, perhaps his brothers also, were marked for death, and saved only by the dropping of the machine guns Monday night. Sam Catalano is reported to be an expanding power in the alcohol racket on the north side, closely aligned with the Aiello-Moran forces.

Last September he was arrested for the shooting of Joe Martolotto, 1237 South Paulina street. Martolotto is a "west sider," without any privileges on the north side, according to one informant. His business is not known, although he is said to have been an employé of Morici Brothers, wholesale grocery concern, whose owners, Antonio and Agostino Morici, were slain in 1925.

Martolotto was shot down at Webster avenue and Dayton street Sept. 16, but not mortally wounded. Catalano was later accused of the attempted killing, a charge he denied. Detectives raided Catalano's store at 1159 Webster avenue that day, confiscating a quantity of alcohol.

BARKER LAWYER ACTS FOR 'UNION' IN OUSTER SUIT

Lynch Hits Snag in Drive on Racketeers.

James [Lefty] Lynch, Chicago labor veteran and former business agent of the Coal Teamsters and Hikers' union, received a setback yesterday in his fight to oust George [Red] Barker and William [Three Fingered Jack] White from control of the organization. The racketeers usurped Lynch's power the day after he had been shot in April, 1928, he charges.

Yesterday morning Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan granted leave to Attorneys Jay Stough, W. W. Smith and Everett Jennings to substitute themselves for Lynch's lawyer, Lawrence M. Fine, as counsel for the union in the injunction proceedings brought by Lynch. Stough produced letters from Milton Booth, president of the union, authorizing the trio to act legally for the teamsters and hikers.

Represent Racketeers, Claim.

"But," protested Fine, "you (the opposing counsel) represent the very element we are trying to get the injunction against. W. W. Smith represented 'Red' Barker, one of the defendants, in a murder trial. He was paid $12,000 for the defense and the check for the fee was made out by a union official at the point of a gun."

Fine told Judge Sullivan that the members of the union had held no meetings for two years. Stough disputed this, saying that both locals had been meeting regularly. The hearing ended with Fine declaring that he would amend his injunction bill and present it Monday, proceeding on behalf of Lynch.

Must Prove Lynch Is Choice.

Lynch's counsel is now faced with the task of proving to the court that Lynch is the choice of the union and that the members wish White and Barker, both of whom are now in jail, deposed. It is Fine's contention that because Barker took control at the point of a gun two years ago he was not elected to any position and should be pushed out.

It is reported that a majority of the union would prefer Lynch to hold his old post, in preference to the hoodlums, but that they fear to come out in the open and declare against Barker and White.

The Lynch petition is not only directed against Barker and White, but asks removal of John Sheridan Sr., secretary of the Chicago Teamsters' council; John Sheridan Jr., secretary of the union; and "Steady" Looney as well.

When Barker announced himself as business agent two years ago, the petition claims, the funds of the union, amounting to $25,000, were seized and $13,000 of them were used to defend Barker in a murder trial.

Lynch was shot at his summer home in Burlington, Wis., April 15, 1928, in the presence of his wife and three of his five daughters. Two men, later identified as William Clifford and Michael Reilly, wounded him three times and the next day Barker "took the union." Clifford and Reilly were later found slain in an auto parked behind a Cicero hotel.

New Yorkers Declare War on Quick Trigger Gunmen

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The fine art of bomb tossing, musciing in and other allied branches of the racketeering profession are in for lean days in this city if District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain carries out the declaration of war he made today. The sudden move to build a fence around the green pastures was brought about by too much shooting and too few arrests.

The fact that a racketeer a day was biting the dust and that frequently the racketeer carried a customer down with him was brought to the attention of Mr. Crain. He was told that gangland was shooting in the nineties over a thirty day period and that the marksmanship was almost 50 per cent perfect and the arrests almost nil. He was told that New York racketeers were terrorizing business men and that little was being done about it.

Seeks to Arouse Citizens.

The district attorney said the situation had reached an intolerable stage here and that he would attempt to arouse the law abiding citizen and law enforcing units to prompt and effective action.

"On next Thursday afternoon," said Mr. Crain' "I shall call to my office fifty representative citizens, including the leaders in trades and industries victimized by racketeers. I shall invite the district attorneys of the other boroughs and a representative of the bar association of the County Lawyers association. I will place before them the facts. I shall ask their coöperation in an effort to rid New York of racketeers.

"The present situation is intolerable. It demands concerted action. It may require legislation amending the penal law and code of criminal procedure and such a grand jury investigation as has been suggested by Dr. Harry Shulman, the research expert of the state crime commission, and by Dr. William L. Butcher, the competent chairman of the police department advisory committee."

Ninety Shot in Month.

Mr. Crain was moved to act by newspaper stories and police reports of unprecedented increases in the number of shootings in the city brought about by internal warfare among the racketeers. Most of the gunning has been done on and by the lesser lights of gangdom and consequently the authorities were more or less astonished when the list for the last four weeks was totaled. It revealed that more than ninety persons had been shot and more than forty had died, mostly because of friction in gangland's ranks.

Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney declared his approval of a war on racketeers in this city. He said his men often know all about a racketeer shooting—the name of the gunmen and everything—but that they are unable to obtain a conviction because they have no witnesses. The victims are afraid to testify against their assailants.

COL. KRAFT SUES FOR $10,935 IN PERSONAL FUNDS

Col. Charles J. Kraft, former commander of the 202d coast artillery, Illinois National Guard, who is under indictment on charges of embezzling some $100,000 in federal funds at the Broadway armory, yesterday filed suit for $10,935 in the state Court of Claims at Springfield.

Kraft's claim alleges that he spent the money from personal funds for the benefit of the regiment. An itemized account includes: Dec. 20, 1923, pianos, $651.70; December, 1923, sporting goods, $10.95; November, 1924, Bowman Dairy company, $254.38; May, 1925, railway fare to Chicago and Alton railway for committee on purchase of armory, $222.43.

Kraft was permitted to resign with his rank last summer when he was indicted by the government. In addition to the federal losses it alleged that another $100,000 was lost by the state during his administration.

PRISONER MAY LOSE EYE; POLICE BEATING CHARGED

Lyle Orders Inquiry When Relatives Complain.

An investigation was begun yesterday into alleged mistreatment by police of William Wall, 25 years old, 7648 South Sangamon street, who was arrested on a charge of intoxication and failure to pay a taxicab bill last Saturday night. Relatives of Wall charged that he was beaten so severely in a cell that he may lose the sight of one eye.

The story was told to Judge John H. Lyle by Mrs. F. J. Hinske, Wall's cousin, and Mrs. Fred Wall, his aunt. Assistant State's Attorney Michael Ostrowski was summoned and began questioning police of the Lawndale station, where Wall was a prisoner.

The story told by Wall is that he became drunk after a football game Saturday and hired a taxicab driven by T. E. Atkinson, 658 Roscoe street. After running up a bill Wall refused to pay it, and he was taken to the Lawndale station by the driver.

Awakes with Battered Face.

Wall declared at the Wesley hospital, where he is being treated, that he remembered no more until he awoke Sunday morning.

"This is the most atrocious assault I have ever heard of," said the judge.

Questioned by prosecutors, police said that Wall was beaten by fellow prisoners. Lockup Keeper Hugh Hollohan, 65 years old and a veteran of 35 years on the force, said that Wall was bellicose when put in a cell.

George David, 1913 South Lawndale avenue, who was in the same cell with Wall, said that Wall abused him until he appealed to the police.

Says Cop Went to Cell.

"Sock him if he makes trouble," David was told, he testified. He did strike Wall several times, he said.

Wall was then locked up with a Negro, Carl McCrutcheon, with whom he also fought until he was again beaten up, according to witnesses.

"Wall was raising a lot of fuss in the cell with the colored man," David testified. "Then I saw Hollohan battered and bleeding, he said, and both eyes were swollen shut.

A rubber tube to a gas heater that had cracked from old age was blamed for the death yesterday of Fred Ingalls, 61 years old, whose body was found in his home at 2445 South Kedzie avenue, by a neighbor.

Racine avenue, and Arnold Nilsson Berge, 19 years old, 2915 Dickens avenue. Sylvester lost his life after obtaining $1.75 in two holdups.

Victims Trail Robber.

Sylvester was shot down by Policeman Robert Walsh of the Maxwell street station, at Roosevelt road and Halsted street, in view of scores of pedestrians. A few minutes before Sylvester had held up Carl Hudson, Negro, 1000 Maxwell street, and Vernon Sims, also a Negro, 611 Liberty street. He got $1.10 from Hudson, and 65 cents from Sims.

The victims followed Sylvester to Halsted and Roosevelt road, and pointed him out to Walsh, and his partner, Policeman George O'Leary.

Walsh armed himself with a shotgun from his flivver, and walked toward the suspect. As he was about ten feet away, Sylvester tugged at his hip pocket in an ineffectual effort to draw his revolver. Walsh fired without raising the shotgun to his shoulder. Sylvester died en route to the County hospital. According to police, Sylvester was known as Joe Silvestro, and Rocco Dominic, and was once charged with larceny.

Bystander Shoots Burglar.

Berge was killed by Harold Montgomery, 24 years old, 3508 North Lawndale avenue, a driver for the Chicago Motor Coach company. In shooting Berge, Montgomery probably saved the life of Patrolman Charles Maloney of the Albany Park station.

Maloney and his partner, Arthur Arneson, had trapped Berge in the apartment of Wilbur Stemin, across the hall from Montgomery, and were leading him to their flivver when Berge indicated a pal was still in the flat. The remark was a ruse. Arneson returned to the apartment, and Berge turned on Maloney. He grabbed Maloney's revolver. The policeman struggled for possession of it. Montgomery, standing near by, ran to the police car at Maloney's appeal, procured a police shotgun, and shot Berge just as the young burglar was wrenching the revolver from Maloney's hand.

A Hotel Guest Wakes Up in Middle of the Night

William Gross, salesman for a Boston concern, awoke with a start yesterday in his room at the Hotel Aragon, 5401 Cornell avenue, to find two strange eyes peering at him through the darkness. Gross made his way to the light switch and beheld an owl perched on the foot of the bed. Later Gross arranged to have his visitor taken to Lincoln park zoo.

CHICAGO RANKED 3D IN ROBBERIES BY U. S. FIGURES

5,315 in First 9 Months of This Year.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Of all of the major crimes Chicago is given a worse reputation for robbery than any other in the data made public by the United States department of justice through its bureau of investigation.

This city may be relatively low in the number of automobiles stolen and also have a good comparative record in the number of murders when the population ratio is considered, but in robberies this city is one of the leaders. Of the 17 cities of more than 440,000 population, from which the government has collected statistics, only Kansas City, Mo., and St. Louis have more robberies per 100,000 population.

In the first nine months of this year, Chicago had a total of 5,315 robberies, according to the federal government report. That is about the aggregate number reported from Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Newark, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Washington, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit combined. The total for all of these cities was 5,368.

Population Comparison Made.

In comparison with Chicago's 3,375,329 residents, these dozen cities have a combined population of 8,631,423—which is two and a half times as many as reside in Chicago.

Of the seventeen cities Chicago has a little more than 22 per cent of the population and in the nine months supplies a trifle less than 36 per cent of the robberies. The local police guess that one stolen car is used in each three robberies. If that is correct, then the holdups in Chicago were responsible for the stealing of 1,771 automobiles in the first nine months of the year.

The government data indicates that the crime of robbery is on the increase. In only six of the 17 cities did the third quarter of the year—July, August and September—show a decrease in the number of robberies. In the other 11 cities there was either no marked change or an increase. On the other hand the month of September showed less robberies in three-fourths of the cities than for the month of August, and Chicago was in that better class.

As between the number of robberies in January, February and March and those in July, August and September, only three cities—Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Minneapolis—show an increase in the third quarter over the first quarter.

The following table shows the total robberies in each of the 17 cities, and the number of holdups per 100,000 population, arranged according to the amount of this particular kind of crime in each city:

City—	No. of Robberies.	Robberies per 100,000.	Rank.
Kansas City, Mo.	904	226.29	1
St. Louis	1,460	177.73	2
Chicago	5,315	157.47	3
Cincinnati	600	134.64	4
Cleveland	971	107.83	5
Los Angeles	1,272	103.12	6
Newark	450	101.84	7
Detroit	1,211	78.94	8
Washington	346	71.67	9
New Orleans	224	49.15	10
Minneapolis	224	48.20	11
Buffalo	215	37.52	12
Baltimore	238	29.54	13
Boston	219	27.92	14
Philadelphia	465	23.67	15
Milwaukee	134	23.40	16

San Francisco is omitted from the above list because it failed to make complete report for the second quarter of the year. For the first and third quarter that city shows 516 robberies, or a rate of 80.93 per 100,000 population for six months, which would probably place San Francisco in fifth place if the figures for nine months were available.

New York and Pittsburgh are not in the list, having failed to coöperate with the federal government to date.

CRIMINAL COURT.

William J. Montgomery, murder, sentenced to the penitentiary for life by Judge G. Fred Rush.

Andrew Shanks, murder, sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary; Frank Jacobs, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Phillip Finnegan.

STATUS OF EIGHT ALDERMEN TO BE TOPIC OF M. V. L.

Oppose Withdrawal to Take New Offices.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A special meeting of the Municipal Voters' league was called yesterday by President Herbert J. Friedman for next week to discuss the proposed immediate retirement of eight members of the city council who were elected to other offices Nov. 4.

While refusing to commit their organizations in advance, some of the league members dislike the idea of aldermen deserting their ward constituencies. It is looked upon as especially offensive at budget making time, when many aldermen perform their most important duty of the year.

Wards Without Representation.

If the eight aldermen quit voluntarily, or appear to be forced out by the corporation counsel's opinion, those eight wards will be without representation in the city council. They have an aggregate population of 614,522. They will be denied representation in the making of $101,000,000 city appropriations — $62,000,000 for corporate purposes, $20,000,000 for permanent improvements, $14,000,000 for the water system, and more than $5,000,000 for repair of streets. These appropriations will contribute a share of the 20 per cent tax increase scheduled for collection on April 1.

The aldermen elected to new offices whom it is sought to shove out of the council are shown in the table below, which also indicates the ward each represents, its population, and the committees of which these aldermen are chairmen:

Alderman—	Chairman of committee.	Ward.	Population.
*Carl M. Maypole	Conventions	28	54,851
P. A. Horan	Streets	21	40,695
A. J. Horan	Track elev.	29	75,312
*T. F. Byrne	Police	15	124,687
T. J. Bowler	Traffic	41	126,247
Wm. D. Meyering		8	92,139
*Jos. B. McDonough	Transit	13	40,133
*George Self		35	83,769

*Member of finance committee.

Ald. Maypole has announced he will not desert his ward constituency, because he intends not to qualify for state senator until his successor is elected next February. The attitude of the others, now at Hot Springs, Ark., has not been announced. It is contended by lawyer members of the city council that the city administration's legal opinion cannot force the aldermen out until they qualify for the office to which elected.

"What is all this hurry about?" commented one lawyer yesterday who is a member of the city council. "Why does the administration want eight vacancies in the city council? Didn't Stanley Kunz serve as state senator and alderman at the same time and didn't the late John Powers do exactly the same thing? Etchen was state senator and corporation counsel at the same time. Robert R. McCormick and Henry Eidmann served as aldermen and trustees of the sanitary district at the same time; and there are probably other precedents.

Cites Case as Example.

"Suppose 26 aldermen had been elected to new offices, would the mayor insist upon firing them all and leave the council without a required quorum with which to transact any city business? Perhaps the city administration wants to boost water rates so it can begin filtration of water at an estimated cost of $60,000,000. I think these eight aldermen should be compelled to forego their pay as aldermen, but should be permitted to serve gratis until it is legally and physically possible to elect their successors."

"There is no objection to the aldermen serving until their successors are elected if they do not qualify for their new offices," said President Friedman of the Voters' league. "I am certain the league will violently oppose permitting an official to draw two salaries. The salary of aldermen has been increased so that he will devote his time to that one office.

"Whether the aldermen elected to new offices shall be forced out immediately is a very serious question; and I would not attempt to commit the league on that until the matter has been discussed thoroughly. Admittedly each ward should have a representative, but the statement of a position on that public policy will not be made for the league in advance of its determination of its position.

"The league will discuss it thoroughly at its meeting next week, which will be set for a day and hour convenient for most of the league membership. We also intend to formulate our expression of the present condition of the city council and give our views of the public value of present members of the council."

$10,000 A DAY STILL IS RAIDED BY U. S. AGENTS

Prohibition agents led by Al Aman yesterday raided a large alcohol distillery in the building at 5833-5845 Broadway, an old car barn, three doors south of the Broadway armory of the Illinois National Guard. The daily capacity of the plant was estimated at 2,000 gallons, valued at $10,000.

The apparatus consisted of a 2,000 gallon receiving tank and a still with two columns, each 36 feet high and one 36 inches and the other 24 inches in diameter. The plant was what is known as a recooker, used to refine first run moonshine alky made in smaller stills. It was said to have been owned by the gang formerly headed by George (Bugs) Moran.

Barney Cower and Lester Cohn, found on the premises, were arrested. The raiders found 2,000 gallons of alcohol.

TROOPS PATROL HAVANA; CITY PASSES QUIET DAY

HAVANA, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Cuba passed quietly its second day of martial law, decreed yesterday by President Machado following upon three days of rioting in the capital and at Santiago.

With heavily armed soldiers patrolling the streets, challenging all suspicious persons and breaking up any attempts at gatherings, the streets of the Cuban metropolis lost their deserted appearance and business was resumed in full.

The government announced tonight that reports of a large death toll throughout the island since the trouble began were unfounded, as a check showed that only seven had died since the trouble began at Santiago Monday and the number of those injured was believed not to exceed 50.

DEMOCRATS SEE STIFF STRUGGLE OVER MAYORSHIP

Chicago Leaders on Way Home from Spa.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Prospects of a battle among Chicago Democrats over the mayoralty nomination in the February primaries seemed to be heightened today as the bathhouse convocation began to break up. A. J. Cermak left in the late afternoon with a special train of homeward bound politicians. Several remained for a few days longer and there are still enough leaders left to make the lobby look like a caucus.

So far as a program is concerned, the Democrats are not much farther along than when they got here Sunday. The general feeling, however, seems to be that there is a better understanding between the cliques. The leaders say those with grouches have had plenty of chance to get everything off their chests.

Lines Sharply Drawn.

As an outcome of the conferences the lines seem to be more sharply drawn between County Chairman Cermak and National Committeeman Michael Igoe, who head distinct groups in the party. As affairs stand now, the organization expects to hold the mayoralty in abeyance until the patronage problem is settled and the 2,000 new jobs are on their way to Democrats.

Both factions may enter candidates in the mayoralty primaries. Some of the leaders maintain that a hot fight would keep the party from going to sleep. They say too much harmony is cloying. Besides, they argue, if the Democrats have no contest in the primaries a lot of them might be found taking an interest in the Republican fight.

Race May Be Free-for-All.

Some of the leaders maintain that the February primary may resolve itself into a free-for-all race, with a large field of candidates. The time for filing candidacies opens the day before Christmas. The leaders take the ground that the public wants a little rest before jumping into the mayoralty campaign, and that a month or so from now will be time enough for the organization to start slate making.

The Democratic officials, new and old, are to meet in Chicago Tuesday to take up a plan for distributing the new jobs captured from the Republicans in the recent election. Few promises have been passed out as yet apparently.

A boom was launched today for Roger A. Simonson, a steel manufacturer of the 42d ward, for the Democratic nomination for city treasurer.

GUNSHOT FATAL TO WOMAN.

Mrs. Josephine Brazanska, 44 years old, owner of a rooming house at 3233 South Union avenue, died in the county hospital last evening of gunshot wounds received during a quarrel Thursday. According to a son of Mrs. Brazanska, the shots were fired by Julius Kirkiels, a roomer.

U. S. Officials Inspect Fair Site to Plan Federal Exhibits

After a day spent inspecting the site and buildings under construction for the Chicago World's Fair of 1933, the special committee appointed by President Hoover to arrange governmental participation expressed complete satisfaction with arrangements.

"I am much pleased to see the progress already made," Assistant Secretary of State William R. Castle, chairman of the committee, said. "The fair organization is in a better position at this time than any such organization has ever been so long before opening date. Most fairs do not have arrangements completed at the time of opening, and the Sesquicentennial exposition at Philadelphia was over before the last building was complete."

Arrange U. S. Exhibits.

The function of the committee, which arrived in Chicago yesterday, is to arrange the method and decide the extent of federal participation. The other two members are R. W. Dunlap, assistant secretary of agriculture, and Julius Klein, first assistant secretary of commerce.

Mr. Castle said that until a study of present exhibits had been made the committee could make no statement as to the nature of its recommendations. The committee will recommend appropriations which probably will be made by the government departments, and will, in the opinion of fair officials, probably reach $5,000,000.

The committee was met at the station by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the fair organization, and escorted to the Blackstone hotel, where they were joined by Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, general manager of the fair.

See Administration Building.

In the morning an inspection of the fair site was made, with particular attention to the administration building, now nearing completion. Other institutions visited were the planetarium, the Field museum, and the Shedd aquarium. At a luncheon in fair headquarters an inspection of the working model of the fair was made.

At an executive meeting of the directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday the board authorized Leonard Reaume, president, to appoint a committee to represent the association in any cooperation that should be requested by the World's Fair directors. An exhibit of home development plans was discussed.

AIR COMMISSION URGES WORK ON ENLARGED FIELD

The Chicago aero commission yesterday urged city officials to make a start on the development of the municipal airport early next year to aid the unemployment situation. A bond issue of $450,000 was approved last April, but has not been expended.

Expenditure of the bond issue was held up by City Controller Schmidt as the city's lease at that time had only six years to run. Since then a new lease has been written and will be passed by the council after Jan. 1 when an appropriation for rental can be made. The new lease is for 50 years and enlarges the airport to 588 acres.

Plans for the airport improvements have been prepared by Walter Wright, superintendent of the city's bureau of aviation. These were approved generally yesterday by the commission. The proposed improvements consist of extension of runways and the construction of new ones, laying of sewers and the construction of a passenger and administration building.

Foreclosure Suit Is Filed Against Shoreland Hotel

Alleging an indebtedness of $4,800,000, the Central Trust company of Illinois yesterday instituted foreclosure proceedings in the Circuit court against the Shoreland Hotel company, 5454 South Shore drive. The indebtedness, according to the bill, is represented in a trust deed for bondholders executed in April, 1925, with bonds due and payable up to 1935.

WINTER BLOWS INJUN SUMMER OUT OF THE WEST

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 14.—(AP)—With snow falling in many sections, winter came to the west today to whisk away the last vestige of Indian summer.

From Denver to the Pacific coast and from Canada to Mexico snow fell and in the lowlands along the coast there was frost or rain.

In California it was clear and cold in most places, following a day of snow and rain. The snow blanketed the Sierra and plateau region generally. In San Francisco the minimum dropped to 48 and in Los Angeles to 52.

30 Motorists Snowbound.

Kalispell, Mont., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Grave fears were felt tonight for motorists marooned in snowdrifts near Kalispell. Twenty-seven machines were marooned between Summit and Belton and six between Summit and Glacier Park station.

SWANSON TO LET CAT OUT OF BAG IN BAIL BOND FAKES

Prosecutor and Judges Discuss Bail Bureau.

State's Attorney Swanson announced yesterday that, as a curb on bail abuses, his office will give publicity to every forfeiture of a worthless bond. The statement was made at a meeting of Criminal court judges to consider the establishment of a central bail bond bureau to investigate real estate bond schedules before their acceptance in the Criminal and Municipal courts.

The prosecutor said that when the bond bureau is established, he will require each assistant to report to him all forfeitures. If a forfeited bond is found to be worthless, the state's attorney will name the judge and demand an explanation of his failure to have the bureau examine the schedule.

"There is no excuse for approving a worthless bond," Mr. Swanson said. "In my service on the Municipal and Circuit court benches, I did not do so."

Bond by Proxy Found.

Examination of Municipal court records revealed instances of releasing persons by proxy and on valueless bonds.

Attorney R. R. Covelli was released on three confidence game charges on a total bond of $7,500 last June. The bond bears the notation Municipal Judge Joseph W. Schulman per H. Gwynn, sergeant of police at the detective bureau.

The record showed that Judge Schulman accepted bonds from Louis Ascher, 5009 Sheridan road, blacklisted bondsman, on three charges of larceny on June 26, and that the bonds, totaling $9,000, are under forfeiture. Municipal Judge William R. Fetzer is revealed in another record as having accepted from Ascher a bond for Harry Kaprall which states that the bondsman did not know the size or location of the offered property.

Will Seek New Laws.

At the meeting the judges decided to await the installation of the new judges in the Municipal court before urging that court to cooperate in a bond bureau. The judges approved the work of the bond department under Assistant State's Attorney A. C. De Witt except for collection of forfeitures, a situation which they plan to remedy by seeking a change in the present laws.

Mrs. Ida Ostrowsky, 711 South Kenneth avenue, who was arrested Thursday when it was found that the value of the property she scheduled as bail for Francis Farley, fugitive bank robber, was not as high as her declaration, appeared yesterday before Municipal Judge Francis Borrelli on a perjury charge. Mrs. Ostrowski said she had acted on the advice of Herman De Fries, bond runner. The case against her was continued until Dec. 31 to enable the police to bring De Fries to court.

Chicago Gives World Chance to Harp on New Crime Tune

The press of the United States and of the world, in its treatment of Chicago's crime news, has had ample material in recent months to show Chicago in a new light.

If the editors of the newspapers outside Chicago who have so often labeled Chicago as the nation's "crime capital," have not reflected a new order of things in this city it has not been because they were denied the opportunity.

These facts seemed established yesterday in interviews obtained from the Chicago executives of the Associated Press and the United Press, two news distributing agencies with world coverage.

Battle Against Crime Told.

Many thousands of words descriptive of Chicago's battle against crime, have gone over the wires from these two news services, carrying to many parts of the world the news of the campaign.

L. A. Brophy, news editor of the Associated Press, pointed out that at all times the A. P. has treated news of Chicago's crime and of its efforts against crime according to its value as news.

"We have sent out many detailed stories," Mr. Brophy said, describing the recent drive against gangsters by use of the vagrancy law, and we have covered fully the efforts of the government to imprison gangsters and politicians in prosecutions for violation of the income tax laws.

The Uncolored News.

"A story is a story to the Associated Press, whether it be on one side or the other, and the Associated Press carries only the uncolored facts of the news, without comment.

"The A. P. has sent out in full detail stories of the activities of Judge Lyle in his treatment of gangsters. Recently we sent out a sketch of Pat Roche, chief investigator for State's Attorney Swanson, and a description of his activities in connection with the discovery of the safe deposit boxes of Jack Zuta.

"When a crime is committed in Chicago the A. P. covers it fully, as news, and I might say that the newspapers of other cities still seek and obtain the fullest coverage of Chicago crimes.

"At the same time, when judges, prosecutors and citizens and organizations score against crime, we present the news of this activity fully."

A Swing in the Pendulum.

Earl J. Johnson, central division manager of the United Press, sees a great swing of the pendulum in Chicago's crime news situation.

"Until some months ago," Mr. Johnson said, "by far the greater proportion of crime news sent out from Chicago concerned the commission of crimes. Today almost all the crime news from Chicago grows out of the campaign to put down crime. It is anti-crime news that is featured now.

"It seems to me that the officials engaged in the war on crime have attracted keen public interest in their activities that was lacking before.

"It apparently has been true that bad news in Chicago is good news elsewhere. This may be due to old jealousies. The United Press has presented the truth in reporting the crime situation in Chicago. We have no editorial policy except to present the most interesting news."

W. C. T. U. FIGHTS REPEAL EFFORTS, LEADER ASSERTS

Houston, Tex., Nov. 14.—(AP)—The Women's Christian Temperance union will stand firm against all attempts at repeal of national prohibition, and hopes through education to obtain "willing obedience and orderly enforcement," Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president, said in addressing the fifty-sixth annual convention of the organization tonight.

The W. C. T. U. leader asserted the American people would never support a repeal program.

Plans for a rally in Washington coincident with the convening of congress Dec. 1 to "show the dry members of congress that there is a lot of dry strength and to hearten them" were discussed today by the executive committee.

Greetings to the W. C. T. U. members were received from President Hoover.

Mrs. Boole said the wets "made some gains in congress" in the recent elections, but were "a long way from the necessary two-thirds of the house and senate to submit an amendment for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and a long way from the necessary majority to modify or repeal the national prohibition law."

NOTED COMEDIAN SENT TO PRISON FOR $3 THEFT

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Tired of granting suspended sentences to Billy Montgomery, once the highest paid performer in vaudeville, the justices of Special Sessions sent him to the penitentiary today for an indeterminate term of six months to two years. He appeared before them charged with the theft of a pair of fur cuffs, valued at $3, from a Broadway department store.

The actor, with his former wife, Florence Moore, formed the famous vaudeville team of Montgomery and Moore.

CRIME ERA LAID TO DRY LAW BY WICKERSHAM AID

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Prof. Harold R. Medina of the Columbia university law school, a member of the Wickersham commission, named prohibition as largely responsible for the general disrespect of all law during an address before the annual convention of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters here today.

"Disregard for law largely can be laid to prohibition," said Prof. Medina. "This disrespect also can be traced to the late war, to the greediness of the modern generation, or the lack of religious training."

He pointed to the general demand for the modification of law for the benefit of the layman, and said the public had the power to speed up such simplification. Continuing, he declared "Perjury, too, has become so common that juries refuse to indict. Now there is a movement under way to make perjury a minor offense."

MAX GUGGENHEIM SUES ANNA GOULD AND HER HUSBAND

PARIS, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The former Anna Gould and her husband, the Duke de Talleyrand, were sued for 3,000,000 francs (about $120,000) today by Max Guggenheim, prominent sportsman, who alleged they had damaged him to that extent by filing against him an unfounded charge of swindling.

The case grew out of a dispute which arose when the duke and duchess purchased part of Guggenheim's racing stable at Cannes for 3,000,000 francs. The duchess paid $25,000, but it was alleged that when Guggenheim asked for the rest of the money the duchess refused, saying her expert told her the horses were not worth more than 1,000,000 francs.

The duke and duchess later filed a complaint charging Guggenheim with swindling. Their suit was thrown out.

SO. AFRICA GIVES $4,761,000 FUND TO AID FARMERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Nov. 14.—It was officially announced today that the government is placing $4,761,000 at the disposal of the South African Land bank to provide relief for distressed farmers.

The Free State reports serious losses to farmers on account of drought. Thousands of heads of sheep and cattle are dead, while lambs have been slaughtered because the ewes were unable to provide milk for them.

Hundreds of acres of lands are parched. Crops are completely ruined.

WILL U. S. STOP SALE OF JUICE TO MAKE WINE?

Grape Industry Backed by Farm Board Loan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—There was increased speculation today as to whether the department of justice could and would continue its policy of hands off in the case of home made and home fermented wine.

Word came from Milwaukee that the sale of concentrated juice from wine grapes was being continued there, and copies of advertisements in which the federal farm board support of the grape industry was flaunted were received here by prohibition officials. Wets and drys alike began to wonder whether light wines had not already become a fact without the repeal of any modification of the Volstead act or repeal of the 18th amendment.

They pointed to the situation in which the government finds itself pledged to enforce the prohibition laws on the one hand and on the other actively helping the grape industry with a farm board extension of $14,000,000 credit. The Fruit Industries, Ltd., which is putting out the grape juice is a subsidiary of the grape control board of California, which is getting the federal assistance.

Stand Remains Unchanged.

If the Fruit Industries campaign spreads it is being asked whether the department of justice can keep on refusing to notice it. Up to a late hour today the prohibition bureau and the legal division of the department had not modified its stand of noninterference with fruit juices made or used in the home and nonintoxicating "in fact."

Among the advertisements received here was one from the Milwaukee Journal five colums wide telling of a "new quality-guaranteeing name for a famous old product (the pure juice of California wine grapes); of a new plan which makes it easy for you to have the home supply of this beverage which the law permits you (according to section 29 of the national prohibition act); and of a great government—created cooperative organization which offers the product to you with an absolute money back guarantee."

Guaranteed to Please.

The advertisement recommends its dealers "who will take your order for home delivery and give you an absolute guarantee that it must please you."

The "please you" is in italics, and th customer is given a choice of eight varieties.

U. S. Pilot, Held by Chile as Rebel Aid, Flees Over Andes

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The safe arrival in Neuquen, Argentina, of Orville De Larm, San Francisco aviator, who escaped from a Chilean detention camp where he was held in connection with an abortive revolt against the government, was disclosed today in a telegram to a friend here.

The telegram sent from Neuquen said he would arrive in Buenos Aires shortly. Mr. De Larm and his mechanic were arrested last September in Concepcion, Chile, on a charge of transporting a group of Chilean revolutionists by airplane from Argentina.

Other Yank Expects Release.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 14.(AP)—It was authoritatively learned here today that Orville De Larm, San Francisco aviator, escaped from detention at Concepcion on Nov. 1 and has safely reached the city of Zapala, Argentina.

It was also learned that Reid Smith of Reidsville, N. C., his mechanic on the plane in which the two men were accused of transporting a group of Chilean revolutionists from Argentina, has told friends he expects to be released shortly without sentence.

Restore Quiet in Peru.

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A semblance of calm existed tonight in the Cerro de Pasco mining area, where 15 persons, including two Americans, were killed in labor riots Wednesday, but martial law continued.

Al Callao, where a 24 hour general strike in sympathy with the miners extended yesterday, normal transportation was restored, and in Lima there was no recurrence of the mild excitement which attended yesterday's transportation strike. The Lima strike ended today.

Today also brought a second trainload of 200 refugee foreigners from the mining area, with new details of the disorders.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 14.—Brazil tomorrow will celebrate the anniversary of the founding of the republic in 1889. Women will take part in the military parade through the streets of Rio as about 400 women soldiers arrived today from the state of Minas Geraes. They represent the Legiao Feminina Mineira, which includes 8,000 women. These women took a prominent part in the revolution in Minas Geraes.

The government has issued a decree creating a new ministry of education and public health. Dr. Francisco de Campos has been appointed minister of education and public health.

Brazil Extends Moratorium.

(Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.)

SAO PAULO, Nov. 14.—The government tonight extended for 15 days longer the moratorium which was to have expired on Nov. 30. Under the new arrangement it will run until Dec. 15. The move is seen as a blow to business recovery.

It is reported that Dr. Julio Prestes, ousted president elect, made an unsuccessful attempt yesterday to escape from the home of the British consul, where he is held a prisoner by the new government.

BRITAIN ACCEPTS DOMINION RANK IN HER OWN EMPIRE

Recognizes Full Equality of Other States.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The imperial conference is over and the prime ministers of the empire are scattering to the seven dominions in the seven seas after having sat for nearly two months in London. They accomplished hardly anything that could not have been done by correspondence.

The conference emphasized the difficulty of trying to put on paper anything so nebulous and indefinable as the British constitution, and this was frankly admitted tonight by J. H. Thomas, dominions secretary, who has been the minister in charge of the conference.

"These delicate negotiations," he said, "convince me of the danger of putting in writing a constitution such as the British constitution, whose chief value is that it is unwritten."

State Relations Defined.

Out of the two months of work the definite fact emerges that there is now in existence a draft of a bill known as the "statute of Westminster," which is to be passed by the United Kingdom parliament after all or a majority of the dominions have asked that this be done.

It defines the relations between the states of the British commonwealth, the status of governors general, and in general repeals and takes the place of the colonial laws validity act. It is to become the charter of empire liberty, elevating the overseas dominions to the same rank as Great Britain, and reducing Great Britain to the rank of a dominion of the empire.

Several delicate questions have been left in the air. The chief of these is the question of appeals to the privy council by dominion citizens. The Irish came to London determined to abolish this. They have failed.

The final plenary session was held in the Locarno room of the foreign office this morning.

The only real business was a resolution accepting everything done by the heads of the delegations. Then came speeches from Prime Minister MacDonald and the dominion prime ministers, mostly congratulatory; but there were sour notes in the South African and Irish speeches.

Will Meet Again in Ottawa.

Patrick McGilligan hinted that Ireland might not think it worth while to attend another conference, while Gen. Hertzog confessed disappointment at the work done. He said too much was attempted, and that in the future it would be better to call separate constitutional and economic conferences.

With this end in view it was decided to call an economic conference at Ottawa within twelve months, when all unsettled economic questions will be taken up.

MME. PAVLOSKA SUED FOR $500 IN ALIMONY TANGLE

Mme. Irene Pavloska, soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera company, was sued for $500 in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Eda Mesirow, first wife of Mme. Pavloska's husband, Dr. Maurice E. Mesirow, a physician with offices at 30 North Michigan. According to Mrs. Mesirow's attorney, Cameron Latter, the suit is to collect $350 in back alimony which the physician owes his former wife and for which Mme. Pavloska was a guarantor.

The Mesirows were divorced Dec. 28, 1918. Dr. Mesirow and Mme. Pavloska were married the next day. Before Circuit Judge Trude yesterday attorneys for Dr. Mesirow argued that the physician's income has been reduced from $400 to $100 a month and that he is unable to pay the $45 weekly alimony ordered in the divorce decree. A motion to reduce the alimony will be heard Nov. 21, when Dr. Mesirow appears in court to answer a contempt citation for his failure to pay support to his former wife.

4 SLAIN, 200 HURT AS LABOR RIOTS RAGE IN MADRID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Nov. 14.—Four workers were killed and more than 200 injured when police battled with 50,000 workers in the heart of Madrid today.

The riot was precipitated by a workers' demonstration, staged by the building trades union of Madrid, which took part in the funeral procession of four members of the union who were killed in the collapse of a building here Monday.

The procession, which started out peacefully, became riotous by the time it reached Conovas square and the police charged the mob, shooting and swinging their swords.

While the affair was provoked by purely labor elements it may have serious political consequences. The union, which counts 100,000 members here, has called a protest strike for tomorrow.

14 LEADERS HELP RAISE 5 MILLION FOR UNEMPLOYED

Clarke Campaign to Get Under Way Monday.

Philip R. Clarke, director of Chicago's $5,000,000 community chest campaign for the relief of the unemployed, yesterday signed up fourteen of the twenty-five business and professional men who will help him in the work which gets under way Monday.

These men, most of them veterans of similar campaigns conducted by Mr. Clarke, will serve as chairmen of committees representing various trades and professions. They were to meet at 10 a. m. today in the directors' room of the Central Trust company to hear Mr. Clarke outline the campaign.

This campaign, it is understood, will follow the general plan of that conducted for selling Liberty bonds during the war and the recent citizens' committee's campaign to meet the municipal financial crisis. Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens' committee, will attend the meeting.

List of Leaders.

Chairmen already pledged to serve and their respective divisions of work are as follows:

Melvin A. Traylor, banks.
Samuel Insull, public utilities, petroleum, coal and ice.
Walter L. Gregory, hotels, restaurants and clubs.
E. P. Welles, machinery.
A. V. Booth, Board of Trade.
Graham Aldis, real estate and mortgages.
Charles M. Hines, lumber.
C. W. Sills, stocks and bonds.
Otimar M. Krembs, chemicals and drugs.
Alexander Revell Jr., furniture and office fixtures.
T. J. Carney, mail order and wholesale dry goods houses.
Bertram J. Cahn, men's clothing manufacturers.
W. F. Juergens, jewelry and optical goods.
Walter A. Strong, newspapers and advertising.

"Ever man approached has pledged his best efforts," commented Mr. Clarke. "All are busy with their own affairs, but are willing to give all their time until the $5,000,000 is raised. The women, too, are preparing to play a big part in the drive and I believe our coördinated efforts will bring results within a short time.

"Unfortunately, some of the men sought for chairmanships are ill or out of the city, but by Monday morning our 25 committees will each have able leadership. A gratifying feature of the preliminary work is the deep interest shown by the younger men, who have yet to engage in a whirlwind drive for funds."

Ask Speed on Public Jobs.

The board of directors of the Illinois Manufacturers' association at their monthly meeting yesterday adopted resolutions calling upon President Hoover, Gov. Emmerson, and local public officials to speed the building of public works and directing the association's membership to coöperate with the unemployment commission.

Alfred Decker, chairman of the association's employment committee, outlined various plans adopted by several industries to stabilize employment and aid the jobless. Among the methods tried are: Reduction of overtime, temporary curtailment of weekly working days, alternating shifts and transfer of workers from slack to busy departments.

Cheering news for George F. Getz, chairman of the governor's commission, was the announcement of John F. Gilchrist, president of the Chicago and Illinois Midland railway, that, in accordance with the commission's recommendation to industry, the railway will immediately begin work on improvements planned for 1931. The railway is an Insull property.

The improvements, costing $300,000 and originally intended to have begun next April, will provide between 400 and 500 men with jobs this winter.

Members of the commission were surprised yesterday to learn that the sponsor of an elaborate soup kitchen at 935 South State street, where an average of 2,200 men are fed free three times daily, is Al Capone, Chicago's foremost public enemy and now believed to be hiding from servers of a vagrancy warrant issued by Municipal Judge Lyle.

Good Fellow Suggests Plan for Thanksgiving Charities

A suggestion for Thanksgiving charity was received in yesterday's mail at the Good Fellow headquarters, in THE TRIBUNE offices at Dearborn and Madison streets. A letter, signed "I. M. A. Good Fellow," proposes that those who contemplate giving a basket of table luxuries to the poor on Thanksgiving day should, instead, donate the price of such a basket to be used in providing necessities for some destitute family.

"As one of the old time Good Fellows who hauled baskets to the poor," the letter reads, "I fully appreciate the pleasure derived from knowing that one has furnished a turkey or goose dinner, with cake, fruit, nuts and candy, to some impoverished family.

"This year I'm foregoing the pleasures of giving a basket. After all, an armload of groceries doesn't do much toward relieving the suffering in a family whose income has been cut off by the temporary unemployment situation. For them a basket means merely a day or two of feasting on delicacies, and then the old hunger for want of bread.

"In these hard times I want all of my charity to be used for necessities for some cold and hungry family. Enclosed is my check for $5 for the Good Fellow fund. That's what I spent in other years for a basket."

Instead of a day or two of luxuries, the $5 will buy food for a baby for twenty-five days, or it might buy coal for a stove, furnishing heat to some window and her children for five days and nights.

"Between now and Thanksgiving, two weeks hence," the Good Fellow letter concludes, "there will probably be a lot of clubs and social groups wanting to give a basket to the poor. Can't you convince them that the poor would benefit much more by a small cash donation to the Good Fellow fund?"

YOU WHO KNOW OF JOBS: LISTEN TO THESE PLEAS

Sally Urges You to Help Her Out.

Almost buried under the letters that are piled on her desk from every mail, each batch bringing urgent appeals for help for the jobless, Sally Joy Brown is struggling against heavy odds these days. If there is any one with a desire to lend a hand to the many luckless families whose main need is for a job for some breadwinner, who can give, create, or tell of a job of any sort that will help to alleviate the distress, he or she is urged to call Sally's department today.

Men, women, boys and girls sit waiting day after day in the office of the Illinois Free Employment service at 116 North Dearborn street to hear about those jobs, which are sent over several times a day from the desks in the Tribune Tower, where they are recorded. Every type of job is needed and every kind of work, practically, is possible to the varied applicants listed there.

A Young Mother's Plea.

One of the most appealing of yesterday's letters was from a young mother whose home has been broken up by her husband's loss of work. She wrote:

"I am desperately in need of work. I am a young woman, 22, married, yes; but that doesn't mean I don't need work. I have two small babies, a boy and a girl, and, gee, what I wouldn't do for them. Their father despaired of looking for work and, losing the little home we had, he has disappeared and I know he won't show up until he has something.

He loves them so, I know if he had anything he would send it to his darling babies. I was forced to take them to my mother, who has a large family herself, no room for me. I know she is back in her rent, but too proud to tell me. I wouldn't want an ounce of charity for my babies if only I could get something."

No Shoes and Little Food.

Another deserted mother, left with a small daughter who was born speechless, and her aged father to support, writes that she has tramped the city over and cannot get a job. She adds: "My shoes are so bad now that I can't get out much and Dad hasn't any shoes at all. Evelyn—my baby—hasn't had shoes in months. We have about enough food to last us three more days and I have ninety-five cents in money. Couldn't you find me a job at hotel work, which I did before?"

Still another case is that of the mother who tells of a husband, long out of work, too proud to accept charity, who is a sober, industrious workman willing to accept any kind of position. Therefore, "Our girl, 17, is the only one in our family working since last March, and she is working so steady her health is giving way. Please, Sally, do your best to get a job for my husband so we can keep our family together."

WOLFE'S ABSENCE AT BRIDGE QUIZ ANGERS ALBERT

Demands Commissioner Be Found; He's 'Out.'

The absence of Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, from the meeting of the council committee on efficiency, economy and rehabilitation yesterday aroused the ire of Ald. Arthur F. Albert [43d]. The committee, at the instigation of Ald. Albert, is investigating the contract for the construction of the north approach to the Wabash avenue bridge.

When the meeting opened Ald. Albert asked Chairman B. A. Cronson [4th] to send for Wolfe, who awarded the contract. Later in the meeting Albert asked what response Wolfe had given and was informed by Cronson that Wolfe was not in the building and that his employés did not know when he would arrive.

Hints at Jury Quiz.

"Wolfe will have to be here or he will go to another place to answer questions and all of his records will go with him," replied Albert. "I am attempting to investigate a complaint that has been made to me and I have the right to assume that the department head should be available when the inquiry concerns his department."

The reference by Albert to "another place" was construed by committee members to mean the grand jury rooms, as Albert on Thursday made public a letter to State's Attorney Swanson in which he said that "the evidence thus far adduced discloses such wanton waste of public moneys as in my opinion amounts to a crime" and suggested that Swanson obtain a transcript of the testimony already given for use in preparing a case before the grand jury.

In yesterday's session the aldermen questioned William J. Newman, who had a subcontract under the Ketler-Elliott company to do the caisson work for the bridge approach. Newman testified that his price for caissons below 75 feet was $1.75 per cubic foot with an agreement that he would be paid cost plus ten per cent for extra work caused by striking water, boulders, quicksand or other impediments. This extra above the price of $1.75 amounted to $98,000, he told the committee.

Newman was asked by the committee to furnish a detailed statement of the cost of doing the caisson work per cubic foot which will be compared to the price of $10 the city is paying.

Peasants Battle Reds

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Fighting between peasants and communist forces resulting in much bloodshed in the regions of Ostrov and Orochka, near the Lettish-Russian frontier, was reported today in dispatches from Riga.

The population of a number of villages was reported in the Riga press to have revolted after attempts had been made to enforce the seizure of corn and collectivization of farms.

The villages of Jelino and Dubki were said to have been destroyed by bombardments from an armored train while other villages were partly destroyed. A number of peasants were reported to have been executed and many families imprisoned.

U. S. LOSES CLAIM OF $40,000,000 FROM GERMANY

No Proof Berlin Ordered Munitions Blown Up.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—American claims for $40,000,000 from Germany arising out of the Black Tom and Kingsland munitions explosions during the world war were rejected by the German-American mixed claims commission in a decision handed down today and made public by the state department.

The United States claims were based on charges that the fires had been ordered by Germany as a part of a sabotage campaign carried on in this country prior to American entrance in the war.

No Direct Connection.

The commission held that no direct connection had been established between the fires and German sabotage activities. While stating they were not convinced the Black Tom explosion might have been caused by Frederick Hinsch, head of the German military secret service in Mexico, and Michael Kristoff, an employé of the Kingsland plant, the commission said: "We are quite a long way from being convinced that the fire was caused by any German agent."

The result of the decision is to reduce the amount now owed the United States by Germany on account of war claims to $216,000,000.

The Black Tom case related to a fire at the Black Tom terminal of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company in New York harbor on the night of July 29, 1916. The Kingsland case referred to the destruction of the plant of the agency of the Canadian Car Foundry company, Ltd., at Kingsland, N. J., on Jan. 11, 1917.

Hearings at Washington.

Both fires led immediately to suspicion of German sabotage and claims were established on this ground before the mixed claims commission. Hearings were held both in Washington and at The Hague, the latter being concluded in September. The decision against the United States was signed by Roland W. Boyden of the United States, umpire; Chandler P. Anderson, American commissioner, and Wilhelm Kiesselbach, German member.

The decision opens with a review of the position of the imperial German government and the activities of its agents in relation to the destruction of war materials in the United States prior to the entry of the United States into the war. The commission finds that the imperial German government authorized such destruction and that an organization of German agents had been established in the United States for that purpose; and with this background, "which justified certain unfavorable inferences against Germany," the commission then proceeds to consider the proof offered in support of the claimants' contention that agents employed by Germany were actually responsible for setting fire to the properties, the destruction of which is the basis of these claims.

YOUTH KILLS HIS FATHER, STABS 2, TRIES SUICIDE

Becoming suddenly demented, Roman Binkevigius, 18 years old, 3312 Lowe avenue, killed his stepfather, Frank Binkevigius, with a knife yesterday afternoon, hacked two neighbor women with an ax, and then stabbed himself. He was taken to the Bridewell hospital, where it was said he probably would die.

The women felled in the attack were Mrs. Anna Baltruses, who lives in the rear of the Binkevigiuses, and Mrs. Barbara Shebar, 3318 Wallace street. Mrs. Baltruses was taken to the Peoples hospital and Mrs. Shebar to St. Charles hospital. Both were cut on the head and badly hurt.

Young Binkevigius was in the basement of his home when Mrs. Baltruses entered. He sprang upon her and struck her down with an ax. As his father, hearing the woman's screams, appeared, he plunged a butcher knife into his chest and fled. The youth encountered Mrs. Shebar next, and felled her. A few minutes later he stabbed himself.

Police Destroy Huts Built by Homeless on Lake Front

Police yesterday forcibly evicted the citizens of "Hooverville" from the group of shacks and hovels along the lake shore between Randolph and Monroe streets. The improvised structures, thrown up by vagrants against the coming winter, were pushed over by a tractor and the fragments burned after they had been branded as eyesores. Mike Donovan, unofficial "mayor of Hooverville," with Ed Williams and Herman Fette, residents of the community, witnessed the proceedings.

LEAGUE LABOR OFFICIAL STUDIES CONDITIONS HERE

Harold B. Butler, deputy director of the international labor office of the league of nations, arrived in Chicago yesterday for a conference with labor leaders. He will spend a month in the United States studying labor conditions, after which he will formulate a report to the league embodying the result of a world study of unemployment and labor economics. He came to Chicago from Canada.

Yesterday was spent conferring with Victor Olander, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, and with John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Reports were made by local union heads concerning the conditions in their own unions, and a study made of methods suggested for unemployment relief by the governor's commission. Mr. Butler detailed the activity of the league of nations labor department, which has as its aim the betterment of labor throughout the world.

Pheasant Hunter Kills Red Fox Near City Limits

A fox was killed yesterday by a pheasant hunter on the outskirts of Chicago. Max Deruntz, who lives at 157th street and Dixie highway was hunting near 157th street and Crawford avenue when his bird dog came to a point. Deruntz advanced, the dog flushed the fox, which was killed by a second shot. It was a splendid red specimen which Deruntz intends to have made into a scarf.

A DECLARATION of WAR against Unemployment!

WE, the people of Chicago and surrounding territory, who are now employed in commerce and industry and enjoying regular incomes from our daily pursuits, do hereby declare a state of war to exist between ourselves and the common enemy Unemployment.

To prosecute this war to a swift and successful conclusion, to hasten the return of general prosperity, we believe that certain definite measures should be adopted now by everybody who is able to do so.

These measures we believe to be as follows:

I. To maintain the standard of living to which we are accustomed.

II. To continue to make regular, normal purchases of the things which we are accustomed by our living standards to purchase.

III. To anticipate certain future needs now so as to

1. Take advantage of present prices;

2. To guard against the sudden rise of prices which will result if a curtailment of buying is allowed to store up a huge demand.

We believe that the above program should be adopted immediately by everyone who is able to do so, and as a pledge of our support we have signed our name below. Come on, Chicago! Let's Go!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

BLAINE QUIZZES KULP ON POSTAL LEASE RENEWAL

Secretary Also on Stand in Senate Inquiry.

Part of a letter was read into the records of the United States senate committee investigating postal leases yesterday by Senator John J. Blaine (Rep., Wis.), chairman of the committee. Chairman Blaine kept secret the names of the writer and the recipient, but the part read referred to the expiration of the lease on postal station D at 515 South Western avenue.

Jacob Kulp, La Salle street broker who is a specialist in postoffice contracts, and his secretary, Miss Myrtle Johnson, were the only witnesses at the day's hearing in the federal building. F. J. Batchelder, head of a concern that made an appraisal on station D, was named in a subpoena, but deputy United States marshals could not find him.

Blaine Introduces Letter.

The letter was mentioned by Senator Blaine while he was questioning Mr. Kulp. The chairman asked the broker if he knew Harry Sherwood, a rival bidder on postoffice leases. Miss Johnson had been asked if she knew who wrote the letter and her reply was: "Probably one of our bitter enemies."

The part of the letter read by Senator Blaine was as follows:

"A new lease is coming up on station D and they have Kulp in a hole and he can't carry on the financing. We don't want to let Love-Bryan in on this. See Krumbigle and Fleming and see what they want."

Kulp and his secretary had given figures on the financing of the Quincy station at 215 South Jefferson street, station D, and other postoffice buildings around the country. Kulp was questioned closely about station D. His lease to the government expires on April 30, 1931, he said, and he has taken steps to obtain a renewal.

Secretary Is Questioned.

He acquired this property from Bertram W. Frank and Harry M. Smith, who were with him on the Quincy street project. The secretary, Miss Johnson, was then questioned about station D as follows:

Q—What financial condition will the corporation be in if the lease is not renewed? A.—It is not dependent on the government renewing the lease, as we can get as much rent from another tenant.

Q—The original bond issue on station D was $85,000, of which $70,-00 was outstanding at the time Kulp purchased? A.—Yes.

Q—Is refinancing issue was $125,-00? A—Yes.

Q—What reason or purpose was there in increasing the bonds outstanding. A.—There were stations such as F [New York] and Grand Rapids that were not profitable and they were to be put together into a paying proposition.

The Cancellation Clause.

Q—Was the issue justified because of the elimination of the cancellation clause? A.—Not necessarily. It would have been possible to issue $125,000 in 1928, when the lease had six years to run, because rentals then were at a peak.

Q—In your former statement the land value of station D was listed as $6,180 and on your books at present the value is given at $70,500. Was the basis for the increase in the book value the elimination of the cancellation clause? A.—No. It was appraised at that amount by the Illinois Appraisal company, of which Mr. Batchelder is the head.

Kulp told Senator Blaine that he first met Sherwood when Sherwood called on him and said he owned a piece of property in Pittsburgh on which Kulp had bought an option. Soon afterward Sherwood obtained a postal garage contract in Milwaukee on which Kulp had submitted a bid.

"Is he a dear friend of some one?" Senator Blaine asked. Kulp said he didn't know.

"Is he very close to McMillin?" the senator asked. Kulp's answer was: "Closer than I am."

McMillin was identified by Kulp as chief engineer of the department of the postmaster general's office having to do with contracts for substations.

Much of Kulp's testimony had to do with bids he made and on which the contracts were awarded to Ray D. Brown of Indianapolis.

Talks of His Lawyer, Good.

Kulp told of the activities in his behalf of his lawyer, James W. Good, a former congressman who became secretary of war. The broker's records showed large payments for attorney fees, several items of $10,000 being for Good's law firm. Good took him to Washington to meet Dr. Hubert Work when Work was made acting postmaster general. Kulp testified that Dr. Work said to him:

"I wish you boys had been here yesterday. I could have given you something good. We just closed a contract with the Pennsylvania railroad for an air rights building between 33d and 34th streets for $24,-900,000 for 20 years' rent."

Dr. Work agreed to reopen the bidding, Kulp testified, and he said he bid $19,245,000, but the railroad refused to give him the air rights and the building was never erected.

Appointment Question Raised.

Senator Blaine asked whether Attorney Good had been appointed western manager of the Hoover campaign committee before the first federal grand jury investigation in St. Paul into the facts of the leasing of the St. Paul commercial postal station, and if Dr. Work was then chairman of the campaign committee. The time of the appointment of both was fixed as after the first grand jury had reported and before another grand jury was to investigate but did not do so.

In the early part of Kulp's examination he was asked if he knew C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge. He said he had met Slemp in Washington with Good. His friendships, however, did not help him much on some occasions, Kulp said.

The senate committee will resume its hearings in St. Paul on Monday.

IOWA CORN HUSKER WINS CHAMPIONSHIP OF U. S. FOURTH TIME

Norton, Kas., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Fred Stanek of Webster county, Iowa, champion corn husker of the nation in 1924, 1926, and 1927, won that honor again today in the seventh annual contest here with a net load of 3,123.3 pounds, or 30.34 bushels of corn at the end of the 80 minute husking period. Guy Simms of Harlan county, Nebraska, ranked second with 2,075.5 pounds, or 29.65 bushels.

The total amount husked by the new champion today was the greatest in any contest in which he won the championship, but it was slightly over 330 pounds short of the record established by Elmer Williams of Illinois in 1925.

In the highest six with Stanek and Simms with the bushels husked were: Theodore Balko, Redwood county, Minn., 28.83; Ray Hanson, Cottonwood county, Minn., 28.439; Orville Welch, White county, Ill., 28.41, and Harold Holmes, Henry county, Ill., 28.25 bushels.

ALL BUT TWO OF RAIL TERMINALS CALLED DISGRACE

Club Women Told About Tribune's Complaint.

With but two notable exceptions, the railway passenger terminals in Chicago are a disgrace to the city, E. M. Antrim, assistant business manager of THE TRIBUNE, told the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations yesterday at its civic affairs forum in the Hotel Sherman. The representatives of sixty clubs were present.

In the main, Mr. Antrim explained the nature of the complaint filed by THE TRIBUNE with the Illinois commerce commission in August, which demanded that the twenty-four passenger carrying railroads entering Chicago construct sufficient passenger terminal facilities and electrify in their suburban zones. The suit is pending.

For Public Convenience.

"The only interest THE TRIBUNE had in filing this complaint was the welfare, convenience, and necessity of the public in the metropolitan district of Chicago," Mr. Antrim said. "Its action in this matter received the commendation and indorsement of practically every chamber of commerce and civic organization in the various neighborhoods and suburban areas in and surrounding the city."

"The North Western railroad has a new station, which, according to present standards, may be considered modern in every respect, with the exception that the trains entering it are not electrified. The same is true of the Union station and the roads using it as a terminal.

"I think it might truthfully be said that, insofar as the remaining passenger stations in Chicago are concerned, it is the consensus of the traveling public that they are a disgrace to the city of Chicago. In the language of the complaint, they are archaic and wholly inadequate to meet the modern needs for terminals for passengers.

Operation Will Be Impossible.

"All trains entering these stations are operated by steam and are not operated with regularity and dispatch. Stations are overcrowded and congested and wholly lacking in proper facilities and appliances for the proper handling of passenger trains. The increase in population which may be reasonably expected during the next ten or twenty years by this great metropolis will make the operation of these terminals on the basis of present standards impossible."

Mr. Antrim read a table showing the number of passengers carried by the Illinois Central railroad's suburban passenger service before and after it electrified. The electrification was completed in 1926. The table follows:

Year.	Passengers.
1922	21,658,682
1923	22,227,1[illegible]
1924	22,947,[illegible]10
1925	23,366,100
1926	24,326,612
1927	29,192,620
1928	33,206,503
1929	36,230,547

"It is notable in connection with this record," Mr. Antrim said, "that the total falling off of the passenger business for the country since 1920 has been nearly forty-seven per cent."

IDENTIFY AGED TRAIN VICTIM.

The body of an aged man which was found on the North Western right of way at Erie street Thursday night was identified yesterday as that of Andrea Lindquist, 90 years old, 4901 North St. Louis avenue. He had been struck by a train.

BOOKS

BRIEF REVIEWS OF THIS SEASON'S NEWEST BOOKS

BY THE LITERARY EDITOR.

FICTION.

The Farsway Bride, by Stella Benson [Macmillan], is an engaging whimsy by an incomparable writer—the story of an exiled Russian family in Manchuria which amusingly parallels the book of Tobit of the Apocrypha.

The Owl; the Duck; and Miss Rowe! Miss Rowe! by John Cowper Powys [William Targ], is a de luxe tale [250 copies] from the pen of one of England's most popular writers for Americans.

The Longer Day [Bobbs Merrill] is the portrait of a beautiful woman and a fine one, by the author of "Miss Tiverton Goes Out," an anonymity still unpierced.

Madman's Drum [Cape Smith] is another of Lynd Ward's remarkable novels without words—novels in wood cuts, like "God's Man."

Sun Way, by Margaret Sperry [Boni Paper Books], is the story of a Scandinavian girl's attempt to realize her ideals.

Brother and Sister, by Leonhard Frank [Cape Smith], is about a marriage between a brother and sister who did not suspect their consanguinity.

MYSTERY.

The Appointed Date, by J. Jefferson Farjeon [Dial Press], has humor as well as mystery.

Sir John Magill's Last Journey, by Freeman Wills Crofts [Harpers], is an other Inspector French case.

SHORT STORIES.

Great English Short Stories, edited by Lewis Melville and Reginald Hargreaves [Viking], is over a thousand pages of the best in the language.

Folk Tales of All Nations, edited by F. H. Lee [Coward McCann], contains 950 pages worth from every land.

A Modern Galaxy [Houghton Mifflin], contains sixteen short stories by as many famous novelists all published by the same firm.

Wedding Day and Other Stories, by Kay Boyle [Cape Smith], is a group of thirteen of the author's best.

New Tavern Tales by Robert D. Abrahams [Neale], has good natured humor to flavor its thirteen stories.

POETRY.

Lyric America [Coward McCann], is an excellent anthology edited by Alfred Kreymborg, covering three hundred years, from 1630 to 1930.

Lichee Nuts, by Edgar Lee Masters [Liveright], is a group of short poems with a Chinese whimsicality by the author of "Spoon River Anthology."

Out of Nymph, by Corinne Roosevelt Robinson [Scribners], contains Mrs. Robinson's latest verse.

Archy and Mehitabel, by Don Marquis [Doubleday-Doran], is a collection of that grand rhymer's best stuff.

John Deth and Other Poems [Scribners], is by Conrad Aiken, winner of the Pulitzer prize for last year.

ABOUT PLACES.

New York, by Paul Morand [Holt], is an amusing guide book to our social capital by one of France's most brilliant writers.

The States Through Irish Eyes, by E. O. Somerville [Houghton Mifflin], is a charming account of the author's first visit to America last year—the author being half of the famous Somerville and Ross collaboration.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Cyrus Hall McCormick, by William T. Hutchinson [Century], is about one of Chicago's greatest pioneers. There is an introduction by William E. Dodd.

Letters of James Whitcomb Riley [Bobbs Merrill], edited by William Lyon Phelps, contains in most cases letters which never have been printed before.

Lafitte the Pirate, by Lyle Saxon [Century], is about a glamorous rogue of fabulous New Orleans.

Pepys, by John Drinkwater [Doubleday Doran], makes of Samuel a great man, as well as a great diarist.

Savonarola, by Ralph Roeder [Brentano's], is a searching and fascinating study of the man who tried to create a city under the personal supervision of God.

The Passionate Rebel, by Kasimir Edschmid [A. & C. Boni], is a slightly novelized history of the love which Byron bore his half sister.

Here's Audacity, by Frank Shay [Macaulay], is a collection of American legendary heroes from Paul Bunyan to Casey Jones.

Bach, the Master, by Rutland Boughton [Harpers], is something of a spiritual biography of the composer.

Alaric the Goth, by Marcel Brion [McBride], is the life story of the man who sacked Rome so spectacularly some years ago [in 410 A. D.].

High Stakes and Hair Trigger, by Robert W. Winston [Holt], is a dashing biography of Jefferson Davis by the author of "Andrew Johnson."

John Wesley, by John D. Wade [Coward McCann], is a candid but affectionate picture of the great Methodist.

Undiplomatic Memories, by William Franklin Sands [McGraw Hill], lives up to its title. Mr. Sands' diplomacy was practiced mostly in Japan and Corea.

NONFICTION.

The Life of the Ant, by Maurice Maeterlinck [Day], is a work to stand beside the author's great "The Life of the Bee."

The Best Plays of 1929-1930, by Burns Mantle [Dodd Mead], is the annual manna to theatergoers.

The Magic of the Book, by William Dana Orcutt [Little, Brown] is a further volume of reminiscences concerned mostly with books and their makers and their romance.

Beasts Called Wild, by Andre Demaison [Farrar & Rinehart], is the translation of the volume which won the Prix du Roman of the French Academy, a really thrilling book about animals.

Moving Forward [Doubleday Doran] is a statement of the philosophy [business and economic] of Henry Ford, set down in collaboration with Samuel Crowther.

The World's Economic Dilemma, by Ernest Minor Patterson [McGraw Hill], is a scientific consideration of the subject.

The Gun Club Cook Book, by Charles Browne [Scribner's], is a real cook book, sponsored by a famous Princeton club and written by a man who is "sometime mayor of Princeton, one time member of congress, A. M., M. D., and some other things, but primarily interested in cookery."

Parade of the Living, by John Hodgdon Bradley Jr. [Coward McCann], is a geological history of life on earth.

The Colophon is the third volume of that marvelous book collector's quarterly.

Arab Interlude, by Kathryn Hulme [Macrae-Smith], with illustrations by Helene Vogt, is the word and wood block record of a motor trip by two women across North Africa.

An American Epoch, by Howard W. Odum [Holt], is a historical interpretation of the south of today.

How Readers Awoke, Making Author Famous

'The Story of San Michele' and Axel Munthe.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Memories and Vagaries," by Axel Munthe. (Dutton.)

No book in recent literary history has had so spectacular a career as Dr. Axel Munthe's "The Story of San Michele." It was published in England almost two years ago. It was brought out in America in July, 1929, not in an edition printed in the United States, which usually happens when a publisher feels that a large sale, or even a medium sized one, awaits a book, but a book imported in what is called "sheets," unbound.

It had almost no reviews. And then, simultaneously in England and America, that mythical group called the general public discovered it. Almost by magic it became overnight a book that was not only talked about but read. A few English critics began praising it so extravagantly that the poor author must have had an attack of sheer funk at what he had unwittingly produced [for the very tone of the book—its casual informality—belied such immodest praise]. Months after its publication it began to be a best seller. Since it began topping that list it never has strayed off, either in England or in the United States.

By this time a good proportion of the reading public has read "The Story of San Michele." Those who have read it will rush instanter to the bookshop for "Memories and Vagaries," the "new" book of Dr. Munthe, which, unlike its famous predecessor, is roaring on to the literary scene like a lion instead of just lamblikely appearing unheralded. They will find that "Memories and Vagaries" is a reprint of a book which was published in 1898, and was written many years before "The Story of San Michele."

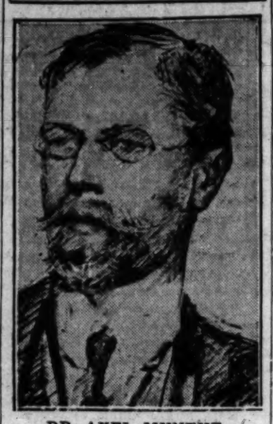
If that fact disappoints readers and they also are disappointed in a few of the "memories," finding them slightly vagarious, or oversentimental or a little too flourishing in their style, they have only to turn to the author's preface to be wholly disarmed. Among other things which he says, with charm, in the preface is:

"'Memories and Vagaries' have been out of print for long. Death was due to natural cause, and the few mourners who accompanied the book to the common grave of oblivion have so far borne their loss with stubborn resignation. So have I, until the long forgotten book was read to me the other day by a friendly voice. As I listened with a compassionate smile on my lips to these humble stories, I suddenly felt a pang in my heart, and I wished I could write today just such a book as this with all its shortcomings, its boyish boisterousness, its guileless self-consciousness, its incorrigible joie de vivre and its unshaken faith. Alas! I shall wish it in vain, it is my youth I wish for."

After such a naïve apologia the reader will see "Memories and Vagaries" through the eyes of the author. That apologia may blind the reader to the fact that "Memories and Vagaries" is really, at times, an oversentimental picture gallery; that it entirely lacks the sophisticated humor of "The Story of San Michele," which gives the doctor's later memories their most intense appeal. For without that humor death would stalk too terribly through its pages, man would be too cruel to his fellow men, and, irony would be the bitter food of fate. "Memories and Vagaries" is interesting to admirers of "The Story of San Michele," for in it [as in "Letters from a Mourning City," another book published the year following "Memories and Vagaries," and also long out of print] are the roots of the character and the philosophy which blossomed in "The Story of San Michele." In itself the book might have lain at peace in its grave except for a few sketches which are as sophisticated and as memorable as anything in "The Story of San Michele."

The best of them are "La Madonna del Buon Cammino," which is a touching and ironic picture of the cholera plague and simple faith in Naples, and "The Dogs in Capri," which is the essence of the lazy life on the island, and which contains a sharp description of the old age of the dogs which might be the epitome of man's last years.

THIS IS HE



DR. AXEL MUNTHE.
This dashing gentleman is the author of "Story of San Michele" and the just republished "Memories and Vagaries," as he looked in 1906, when he was a fashionable Parisian specialist.

About Authors, Including One Nobel Award

Shave for Sinclair Lewis; Mary Borden at Tea.

BY ALTA MAY COLEMAN.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Just forty-five is this Sinclair Lewis, who from Sauk Center, Minn., came east to Yale, who made his first two trips to England on cattle boats, who wrote his first novel at night after a full day's work as editor and advertising manager in a New York publishing house, who jumped into the best seller class with "Main Street," remained there with "Babbitt" and "Arrowsmith" and "Elmer Gantry," and who now is the youngest author and the first American to receive the Nobel prize.

SINCLAIR LEWIS.
[Drawn by Covarrubias.]

He is, too, considerable of a lad as to height, over six feet, with long, narrow face topped by high, wide forehead and straight sandy hair. His complexion is as ruddy a red as ever country squire's of olde England.

But in the alertness of his slate-blue eyes, in the sudden gesture of his long, shapely hands, in his quick-paced thought and speech you find the modern, energetic, high tension American. He has that nicest trait of the nicest Americans, too, a frank, friendly directness, an unaffected enjoyment of good fortune.

The award came, he says, as a complete surprise. The news, cabled from Stockholm, was relayed by telephone to him in Connecticut, where he is now living in Franklin P. Adams' country house. Picture Mr. Lewis in bathrobe and slippers, well lathered for a shave, receiving word of his honors. The entire morning was spent in sprints up and down the hall, razor in hand, each attempt to finish that shave interrupted by more phone calls from friends and newspaper folk.

Three tea parties graced last week, Tuesday, John Farrar entertained for the English visitor, Allen Lane, who is something or other important in the publishing house of Bodley Head. He is son, or is it nephew, of the late John Lane, and a most personable demonstration of the fact that the movies can't snare all the best looking young men. You'll probably find him disguised as a hero in a story by Pannie Heaslip Lea, Achmed Abdullah, Honoré Wilsie Morrow, or Stephen Vincent Benet. They were all hovering round, and so were Isa Glenn, Floyd Dell, Dawn Powell, Katharine Brush, and Will Cuppy. Mr. Cuppy, having cashed in on retirement in "How to Be a Hermit," is now collecting data on "How to Be a Lecturer," having just returned from a series of speaking dates in Indiana.

Mary Borden, new-come from England, in a black velvet frock and ostrich trimmed hat, assuredly new-come from Paris, was Doubleday Doran's guest of honor recently at the Coffee Shop.

Her newest novel, just off the press, is "The Woman with White Eyes." Her husband, Brig. Gen. Spears of the British army, won his literary spurs this season with "Liaison," a book of war reminiscences, which is creating much talk in England and soon to be published here. Notable guests at this party were Rose O'Neill, author and illustrator of her just published novel, "The Goblin Woman"; Edna Ferber, who is at work on a new book to be out in the spring, and Bayard Schindel.

"CAKES AND ALE," BY MAUGHAM, WINS SWINNERTON PRAISE

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—By the time this letter is printed two very exceptional books will have been published in London — W. Somerset Maugham's new novel, "Cakes and Ale," and Vicki Baum's "Grand Hotel."

W. S. MAUGHAM.

Mr. Maugham has temporarily deserted his lovely home in the south of France and is due in London for the first performance of his new play, "The Breadwinner."

Mr. Maugham's book, which is perhaps his most important novel since the masterly "Of Human Bondage," is brief and brilliant; "Grand Hotel," a translation of "Menschen im Hotel," concentrates a number of human dramas into a single setting.

The translation of "Grand Hotel" has been made by Basil Creighton, novelist, who is the nephew of a one time bishop of London, who also was a historian. Mr. Creighton has translated one or two notable books from the German during the last few years and his translations are always distinguished. But I wish he would continue writing novels; for in "The History of an Attraction" he showed gifts of an altogether outstanding kind.

However, we must be glad that Vicki Baum has been so fortunate in his translator. This book is the choice for October of the English Book society, which, I am told, now has nine thousand members.

The theme of "Grand Hotel," although the actual stories are quite different, has some affinity with the theme of Mr. Arnold Bennett's new long novel, "Imperial Palace," which will be published this month. "Imperial Palace" deals with the huge organization of a gigantic modern hotel—a subject truly of extraordinary size and grandeur. It thus has a background similar to the background of "Grand Hotel"—nothing else. Nevertheless I shall expect some comparisons to be made.

Mr. Bennett, having finished his book, has been holiday making in Devonshire. He has now returned from Devon and has gone yachting with A. E. W. Mason, another great sailor, whose book "The Dean's Elbow" has been a recent success. Mr. Mason some time ago made the journey in a small boat down the channel to verify his details in "The Dean's Elbow," a fact which serves to show how conscientious he is wherever it is possible to check anything that might interfere with perfect accuracy.

Noel Coward's new play, "Private Lives," is being published simultaneously with its production in the theater.

Mexican Village Life Theme of Research by Robert Redfield

"Tepoztlan, a Mexican Village," by Robert Redfield [University of Chicago], is a thorough study of all phases of life in a typical Mexican village. It's the work of a scholar. The record, however, is not set down with the lack of reader interest scientific reports often have.

There isn't anything that couldn't be understood by any adult mind. Mr. Redfield, simply and effectively, makes the village and its people live as human beings rather than as mere specimens.

"Tepoztlan" is the first account of daily life in a Mexican village and the fact that it is the work of an ethnologist makes it authoritative. The survey was made by Mr. Redfield for the Social Science Research council of the University of Chicago. F. B.

To the Man Who Knows Its Origin Every Word Presents a Picture

The Ancient Romans Knew That the Eyebrows Expressed Arrogance—From Them We Have Our Word
SUPERCILIOUS
In Latin super (over) plus cilium (eyelid) formed supercilium meaning eyebrow. Because raising the eyebrows was a characteristic habit of the haughty man, supercilium came to mean pride and superciliosus "eyebrow-ish" came to mean haughty, arrogant. Directly from this Latin word comes our own supercilious, giving those who know its origin a mental picture of the eyebrows raised in disdain.
How much more clearly you can understand our English words, and how much more effectively you can use them when you learn their interesting origins as they are explained in thousands of fascinating little stories in
WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY
A collection of these stories is presented in a handsome illustrated booklet—free to you on request.
This great Merriam-Webster answers authoritatively every question you can bring it about 452,000 words in our language. It is a library in one volume, its encyclopedic information making it the most convenient and dependable reference work. Its 2,700 pages are equivalent in type matter to a 15-volume encyclopedia.

BOOKS

Wide Variety in 1930 Books for Children

Fiction, Science, Travel Compete for Interest.

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.

[Director of Children's Work for Branches of Chicago Public Library.]

"What about the new children's books?" The question is pertinent when one stops to consider that 1930 has given us over 800 new juveniles.

Children's Book week is a particularly fitting time to say something in answer. One surveying the field notes with pleasure the many excellent titles, both in fiction and nonfiction, added to the library of young readers ranging from 13 to 17 years.

The present season presents many books of worth and permanence. Such fine offerings as Sigmund Rothschild's "Stories Postage Stamps Tell" [Putnam]; Vernon Quinn's "March of the Iron Men" [Stokes]; Augustus Post's "Skycraft" [Oxford]; Joseph Walker's "How They Carried the Mail" [Sears], are found among the books of information. They have careful, scientific presentation, dignity of treatment, excellence of style—making them often superior to books of similar content prepared for the older readers.

In biography the year, unfortunately, has been somewhat poor, but we do have in Henry Chapin's "Adventures of Johnny Appleseed" [Coward-McCann]; Florence Seymour's "Sam Houston, Patriot" [Century]; Mary Wade's "The Boy Who Loved Freedom" [Appleton]; Mabel Holmes' "Joan of Arc" [Winston] well written historical stories. One may seek far and wide before he finds better story telling than Eric Kelly does in his "Blacksmith of Vilno" [Macmillan], or that found in Agnes Danforth Hewes' "Spice and the Devil's Cave" [Knopf].

Of particular interest to girls are Elizabeth Gray's "Meggy McIntosh" [Doubleday]; Alida Malkus' "Dark Star of Itza" [Harcourt-Brace], and Marjorie Hill Allee's "Judith Lankester" [Houghton-Mifflin].

The present year has witnessed also the development of another type of fiction for girls of this age, the realistic story of the modern girl and her problems. This year we find Margaret Raymond's "Linnet on the Threshold" [Longmans-Green]; Gladys Hasty Carroll's "Land Spell" [Macmillan], and Elsie Singmaster's "A Little Money Ahead" [Houghton-Mifflin.]

There is a decided demand for this type of story. Authors who understand and sympathize with the problems of modern youth and who have the talent for fine writing have here an opportunity to make a worthwhile contribution to the literature of the young people of their own day.

Before leaving the subject of reading for the older children one must mention a tendency which is becoming more marked each year—that is the publication of adult classics and other books of merit in editions which will appeal to adolescent readers. This season has brought forth two editions of Chaucer which will be the means of introducing the little known poet to many. These are Frank Ernest Hill's "The Canterbury Tales" [Longmans-Green] and Eleanor Farjeon's "Tales from Chaucer" [Cape-Smith]. Anne Carroll Moore's "Bold Dragoon and Other Ghostly Tales" [Knopf] will rescue from oblivion these fine mystery tales of Washington Irving and fill a pressing need for that kind of story. Stephen Vincent Benet's masterpiece, "John Brown's Body" [Doubleday-Doran], has appeared with drawings by James Daugherty, and one cannot imagine a finer gift for the young poetry lover of high school age.

In the field of younger children's books one finds such attractive information books as Wilfrid Bronson's "Fingerfins" [Macmillan], Edyth Kaigh-Eustace's "Jungle Babies" [Rand-McNally], and Gertrude Kay's "Adventures in Geography" [Volland]. In fiction child life in other lands forms the theme for many good stories, and such books as Helen Carus' "Metton of Tyre" [Doubleday-Doran], Elizabeth Coatsworth's "The Boy with the Parrot" [Macmillan], and Kurt Wiese's "Liang and Lo" [Doubleday-Page] are not only fascinating but valuable reading.

Outstanding among the numerous picture books of the season one finds Charles Falls' "Modern A B C Book" [John Day], Marguerite Clement's "All the World Is Color" [Farrar & Rinehart], with its text in French and English, and Leslie Brooke's "A Roundabout Turn" [Warner]. The latter should not be overlooked by any one looking for good humor, for here we have it in its highest form of excellence, both in pictures and verse. It is one of the real treasures of the year.

In connection with books for younger children one must take note of the attention focused upon the littlest ones and their needs. Two publications of distinction have appeared particularly adapted to use with them, one being "Told Under the Green Umbrella" [Macmillan], a collection of old favorite tales especially good for pre-school and kindergarten age, brought out by the International Kindergarten union, and the other Mary Steichen Martin's "The First Picture Book" [Harcourt-Brace], of which a review appeared recently in this column.

Sea Stories of Many Nations in Single Book

"Great Sea Stories of All Nations," edited by H. M. Tomlinson [Doubleday-Doran], would perhaps have been a better anthology if Mr. Tomlinson had done his own selecting. Miss Elizabeth D'Oyley, whom he credits with that work, has been generous with excerpts from books by authors who knew little about the sea.

SAVAGE LORE

An illustration by Erick Berry from "Folk Tales of a Savage," by Lobagola.

Antarctic Cold, Desert's Perils Faced by Boys

All Are Told for Other Youths to Read.

"His Excellency and Peter," by Theodore A. Harper. (Doubleday-Doran.)

"Roy Chapman Andrews—Dragon Hunter," by Fitzhugh Green. (Putnam.)

"A Boy Scout with Byrd," by Paul Siple. (Putnam.)

"King's Spurs," by Russell G. Carter. (Little-Brown.)

"Pirates' Doom," by E. R. Evans. (Farrar & Rinehart.)

"Trading East," by Freelove Smith. (Little-Brown.)

Almost every type of adventure and every period of interest is represented in this fall's procession of books for the junior and senior high school age.

There is a new book by Theodore Acland Harper and boys who read his "Siberian Gold," "Kubrik the Outlaw," and other titles will pick up this new one, "His Excellency and Peter," with pleasant anticipations which will be fully realised.

Here, too, is a story of Russia dealing this time with the building of the Trans-Siberia railroad and the difficulties which, both within and without the country, threatened to wreck the plan entirely. The hero of the story is a peasant lad, Peter, devoted servant of Stephen Wyld, engineer, known as "the foreigner," whom we met in some of Mr. Harper's earlier books.

The theme is interesting, with Russian conditions of those times well presented. There is action and adventure and it is a rattling good story.

For the boy who likes stories of exploration there are Fitzhugh Green's "Roy Chapman Andrews — Dragon Hunter" and Paul Siple's "A Boy Scout with Byrd." The first describes vividly the adventures of Roy Chapman Andrews and the Asiatic zoological expedition through central China. It tells of the work in the Gobi desert.

"A Boy Scout with Byrd" tells the story of the Byrd expedition as it impressed the young author, a Boy Scout who was permitted to make the trip. Another type of adventure which always finds favor is that of feudal days and Russell G. Carter's "King's Spurs," a story of the French feudal period, is a good one of this kind.

For those to whom the sea offers the path to adventure a list of this kind would be incomplete without mention of that danger and daring found, some time, under the black flag of piracy, some time upon the more respectable but equally adventurous trading ship of early days. Such tales are E. R. Evans' "Pirates' Doom" and Freelove Smith's "Trading East." The first is, as its name indicates, a pirate story and a very fine one, indeed. It is told by a rear admiral and is not only good reading but unique in plot and solution of the mystery.

Boys who like "Black Buccaneer" and "Treasure Island" will enjoy this book.

"Trading East" is a sea story based on Hakluyt's "Voyages" in the sixteenth century. The hero is young Henry Dorset, who is called from his desk one day to sail with an expedition to Cathay. Disaster early overtakes two of the three ships, but the third makes its way safely to Muscovia and is successful in establishing trade with the czar.

Young Dorset sees strange sights and talks with many strange people before he sets foot again on English soil. There are fine descriptions of the countries visited and the author has done a good job in bringing to young people this very usable material in such an attractive form.

"Lords of the Valley" Tells of Britain's Indian Control

"Lords of the Valley," by Flora Warren Seymour (Longmans), is an alluring record of the days when "the valley" meant the valley of the Mohawk and Sir William Johnson was the biggest figure of his day there.

A "spritely boy, well grown, of good parts, keen wit, but most onruly and streperous," came to be the means of winning the tribes of the Iroquois confederacy for the British in their war with the French.

He not only managed to acquire a large "passel" of land for himself, but he was so respected and trusted by the Indians that they accepted him as one of them and followed his advice in war as well as in peace.

Mrs. Seymour is the only woman Indian commissioner and is the author of "The Story of the Red Man." Her interest in that story makes of "Lords of the Valley" a tale of fact that has the pleasure of fancy.

LEADER

One of the illustrations by Rita Leach in "Songs for Johnny Jump-Up," by John Farrar.

Stories of Animals, Horses to Elephants, Told for Children

"Red Horse Hill," by Stephen Meader. (Harcourt-Brace.)

"Navarre of the North," by Esther Darling. (Doubleday-Doran.)

"The Blot," by Phyllis Crawford. (Cape-Smith.)

"Hahtibee the Elephant," by Charles E. Slaughter. (Knopf.)

"Jungle Babies," by Edyth Kaigh-Eustace. (Rand-McNally.)

Boys and girls who like animal stories will find a number of good ones this fall. In the older group, 10 to 12 years, the boy who loves horses never has a large enough collection of stories from which to choose, and in Stephen Meader's "Red Horse Hill" he has an excellent addition to his favorite shelf. It is without doubt one of the best stories we have. Stephen Meader knows how to write for boys, and here he has given them not only a noble hero in Cedar, the beautiful roan colt, but also a fine picture of New England farm life with its simple hospitality and genial good comradeship.

Esther Birdsall Darling's "Navarre of the North" is a story for those who enjoyed "Baldy of Nome." In fact Navarre is a grandson of Baldy and is another of those invincible huskies of the north who do their part in upholding its traditions and making the story of its dog teams always a creditable one. Navarre won his medals not only in the northland but also on the war fields of France with the "Blue Devils," and wears on his collar the Croix de Guerre of France.

Phyllis Crawford's "The Blot" is a cat story for the younger children. This tells in pictures and text the story of a little alley cat and his hard existence. It is certainly not a happy story, but might serve a decidedly worthy purpose in the hands of the child who needs education in the treatment of animals.

Children whose tastes run to lions and tigers and elephants will like Charles Slaughter's "Hahtibee the Elephant" and Edith Kaigh-Eustace's "Jungle Babies." Hahtibee is a young elephant who was captured in an elephant drive and raised on a plantation, remaining there quite satisfied until the call of the wild comes to him one night. It has good Indian background, and can be read by children who found Mukerji's "Kari the Elephant" a little beyond them. "Jungle Babies" is an unusually interesting book in which the babies of the jungle tell their own stories of life as they find it there.

CHILDREN, ELDERS INVITED TO ENJOY BOOK WEEK NOV. 16-22

Nov. 16-22 marks the twelfth annual observance of Book week and book exhibits, pageant, and talks will be the order in clubs, schools, bookstores, and libraries. In the Chicago Public library special story hours, club programs, and attractive exhibits of books will be features in branches and also in the Thomas Hughes room in the main building.

Branch libraries located in stores have arranged window exhibits illustrative of various types of books.

Puppet plays are scheduled for the children's entertainment in several places, and special programs for parents and teachers are announced in school and community papers. A special treat is offered the children of the Henry E. Legler regional branch on the west side, in the presence of Elmer Hader, an outstanding and popular illustrator of children's books, who will be with them there on Friday afternoon, Nov. 21, at 4 o'clock. Mr. Hader will amuse his young audience with a chalk talk, showing them just how his pictures are made. In connection with his visit there will be an exhibit of original drawings by Mr. Hader.

Children in all sections are invited to attend story hours in their local branches, and an urgent invitation is extended to the adult public to visit the public library, either the main building or any of its branches, during this week of special activities.

MR. FESS AS A NATIONAL PARTY.

Senator Simeon Fess of Yellow Springs, O., who succeeded Claudius Huston of Tennessee as chairman of the Republican national committee when the Tennessean seemed to be lacking in several points of grace, is now said to be considering the propriety of his own resignation. Mr. Fess took hold to carry the Republican tickets through the election when it was thought that Mr. Huston might not have the requisite moral heft. A contemplation of the results reveals that what the good Mr. Fess brought home was chiefly broken dishes.

When he was given the job it was thought that a peculiar idea of the public temper guided the decision of the Republican elder statesmen. The country was plainly fermenting against everything that Mr. Fess represented and embodied, all the political ideas and actions for which he preëminently stands or which he craftily glosses. His service as national chairman was posted notice that the Republican national management saw nothing, knew nothing and cared for nothing. He was a standpat keynoter, clarion of voice when the nobility of the noble experiment was to be sung, soft and low when the iniquities of the Ohio gang were in the air. He was typical of the high hat stupidity of the Republican party management taking refuge in the vestry from the sins of its rascals.

Mr. Fess alone is unimportant, but when he is chosen to expound and define the standard doctrines of Republicanism he reveals the addiction to mossback toryism, coercive fanaticism and the reliance upon the political cleric to escape the consequences of political ignominy.

Mr. Fess is holy whitewash, a good man in himself, no doubt, but representing everything of which the northern Republican voters are heartily sick. When he stepped forth as the prophet the big Republican states went either radical or wet or both. They are tired of political crookedness squared by renegade clergymen, of corrupt acts concealed by the waving of moral robes.

When the national management made the assertion of its attitude in giving the title of leadership to Mr. Fess it made the results of the election explicable if not inevitable. The question is whether the management even now can or will interpret the consequences.

SPAIN YESTERDAY, TODAY AND TOMORROW.

Jay Allen of THE TRIBUNE news service is contributing some exceptionally fine articles on Spain of today and yesterday to THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, as readers of them in the drama section have discovered. A sense of the country's remarkable past joined to an appreciation of its colorful present and questioning future qualifies the writer for the assignment which he is meeting admirably.

American interest in Spain has every validity. The Spanish were the discoverers and early settlers of the Americas. They left their language and their culture in most of the regions which they entered. English succeeded them in the north, but even now Americans are in closer contact with the survivals of Spanish occupation than they are with any influences other than those of their own tongue.

The vast and wealthy Spanish empire was ephemeral, a fact which adds to its phenomenon. It was born of a democracy which it killed and which is even now trying to revive itself. It gathered its strength in religious wars against the Moriscos in which zeal and self-interest combined to drive out a waning people and to consolidate their Spanish enemies in the persecutions and conflicts attending the expulsion of a race willing to submit but not permitted to.

Any one who has seen the resemblance between parts of Spain and the plains and mountains of Mexico and southwestern United States will understand why the Spanish soldiers felt at home in the new lands their discoveries had opened to them. There was also the conflict again between the Christian cavalier and pikeman and the pagan, again zeal and self-interest as incentive.

The passage of these steel clad men through the valleys and over the deserts of the American southwest before any English settlement had been attempted further north is as remarkable as any story in American history. Their conquests of Mexico and Peru revived all the legends of Alexander in Asia.

Whatever greed went into the Spanish conquests, their consequences proved to be more religious than commercial. The English penetration when it began was that of the trader, the commercial company. Religion started it in notable instances, but the trader at once stepped to the front. The priest led the way in French Canada. He went with the conquest in Spanish America and made the laws, but the man with a pack train, the farmer with his gun and ax and the man in the counting house at the port cities pushed out the English trails and built the towns. The commercial empire endured and the religious empires disappeared.

The Spanish infantry which arose to power in Europe when the wealth of the new world was being drained into the coffers of the Hapsburgs was as astonishing a fighting machine as the world ever has seen, rating with the Macedonian phalanx, the Roman legion, and the Cromwellian regiment. Its superiority to anything European warfare could produce to meet it, when it was in its flower, was almost incredible. Spain had wealth and power, the making of another continental and colonial empire of long duration, but dug its grave in the Netherlands in three generations of Hapsburg rulers. It had for the moment everything but statesmen. Augustus could have told Charles V. and Philip, his son, that empire could not be built on intolerance.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE.

George L. Harrison, governor of the federal reserve bank of New York, is in England, conferring once more with Mr. Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England. As usual, the subjects of discussion have not been revealed. The discussions, according to the two men, concern "nothing out of the ordinary."

Maybe so; but we confess to a certain sense of uneasiness, if not of alarm, every time these international financial conferences whose purposes are unstated occur. We cannot forget that it was after just such a meeting that the reserve bank lowered its discount rate, cheapened money in this country and thereby gave an impetus to the wave of speculation from which the country is now suffering the bitter consequences. That meeting was arranged in order to bolster the British monetary situation. Prematurely, in the belief of many economists, British finances had been restored to a gold basis after the war. Because of relatively higher interest rates in this country, the tendency of gold to flow to our shores from England was marked. It was with the idea of correcting that tendency that at the request of Mr. Norman our discount rates were lowered. The consequences, needless to say, have been harmful, not only to this country but to the whole world of commerce and industry. By the time our reserve officials realized that a mistake had been made it was already too late to apply the brakes. We were in the midst of an era of inflation to be followed by an equally violent deflation.

We do not maintain that the stability of American business can be maintained without any consideration of the situation in foreign lands. We have a great and growing foreign trade which depends for its continued prosperity upon buying power overseas, but foreign trade at a liberal estimate is only 10 per cent of the whole. Our reserve officials in the past have jeopardized the 90 per cent for the sake of the 10 per cent, and, incidentally, have failed even of their own limited objective, for our foreign trade has suffered of late even more than our domestic trade.

American credit policies must be dictated not by the presumed needs of foreign currencies but by the requirements of the United States. This sounds like an axiom whose acceptance should be universal in this country. The unfortunate fact is that the axiom has been disregarded. It may be disregarded again.

THE LOWEST LEVELS SINCE THE CIVIL WAR.

Prof. Herbert D. Simpson of Northwestern university has given four years and more to an intensive study of taxation in Cook county and Illinois. Much as he might have wished to confine his studies to our theories of collecting public revenue and the technical aspects of assessment and collection, he could not do so. Taxation in this state and county cannot be so isolated from the whole texture of our political organization. Dr. Simpson, accordingly, has had to make an estimate of our political status. It is the estimate of a man trained in fact finding and unbiased judgment. And this is what he says by way of final judgment in his newly published volume, "Tax Racket and Tax Reform in Chicago":

"In Illinois and Chicago the curves of both state and municipal government have sunk in recent years to the lowest levels since the civil war. The scandals connected with the recent state and city administrations, the record of the sanitary district, the buffoonery associated with the board of education, the indictment of judges, the conviction and penal sentences of public officials, and the whole crime wave are only the more notorious episodes of the current status."

He has only skimmed the surface in this indictment. He could have filled a book with the details. We have reached "the lowest levels since the civil war," when Chicago was hardly more than a frontier town. He might have added that there is little or no evidence that the barometer is rising or about to rise.

For example: Ald. Albert makes the flat accusation, supported by evidence, that the city is paying seven times as much for the digging of caissons for the Wabash avenue bridge as the Lincoln park board is paying for similar work. He presents the figures and he offers the testimony of a contractor whose low bid for the Wabash avenue work was rejected. The city council refers the matter to a committee without a chairman. With difficulty the committee is organized. It starts its hearings. The public is indifferent, as indifferent as it was to disclosures a few years ago that the federal government's dredging contracts in the Calumet area were let at far lower unit costs than those of the local government in the same area. It is all assumed to be in the order of nature. Public officials who do not cheat are regarded as more astonishing than public officials who do. Though the nature of the charges regarding the bridge caissons was known to all newspaper readers, Ald. Albert has just found it necessary to send a special invitation to the state's attorney to have a representative on hand to hear the evidence.

"The lowest levels since the civil war." That is a phrase which should stick.

THE EAST QUALIFIES.

[Battle Creek Enquirer and News.]

Though perhaps discounted by some as contributing little to education football nevertheless has served to dispel illusion and bring forth truth in at least one instance.

In days past the idea was harbored in these western parts that the east played a game of football that was only a mild brand and even slightly effeminate compared to that played in the west. It was said that in modern football the west gave a more vigorous and virile exhibition than the east.

Since Michigan and Harvard began their present day series the idea has lost favor. Nobody from even the widest of the wide open spaces could expect a more vigorous interpretation of the game than that given by the young men who play for the glory of Harvard. Neither the game last Saturday nor the one a year ago could by any stretch of the imagination or taint of prejudice be likened to ping pong. There was nothing but hard going football and plenty of that, removing all doubt that they build them as well to stand the wear and tear in the east as in the west.

POPULATION INCREASE.

THE yearly increase of population in the United States is due to come to an end in 1944, according to Mr. J. S. Lawrence, writing in Barron's. This is a prophecy based on a calculation and, like all prophecies, is in some danger because of unforeseen changes. The calculation is based on the trend in the death rate, certain corrections in that rate, the trend in the birth rate, and on the immigration under the present law. The death rate has about reached the irreducible minimum.

It has not fallen materially anywhere during the last eight years, and in some places it has risen. The average age at death and the average age of the population both indicate that the present death rate is too low. Mr. Lawrence sets 16 as the death rate for the entire country, which will be normal in 1944.

Assuming that the birth rate falls during the next nine years as fast as it has fallen in the last fifteen, Mr. Lawrence sees deaths and births balancing each other in 1939. The first national census which went into much detail was that of 1830. It showed a great increase of population by reason of excess of births over deaths. Just one hundred years later we are having the last census which is to show an increase by reason of births exceeding deaths.

In his calculations Mr. Lawrence does not take into account another factor which others include. These other statisticians predict an even more rapid decrease in birth rate because of the relatively small numbers of women of child bearing age and nearing that age. If this factor be considered the birth rate might reach the death rate before 1939.

An annual immigration of about two hundred thousand is expected to postpone the date of population stabilization until 1944.

This is not the first cry in the wilderness. For a few years vital statisticians have been telling us what was coming. Earlier in the spring a popular magazine, the American Mercury, carried an article to the same effect. Recently a special investigator for certain large business interests was around checking up on figures and investigating generally. The University of Chicago sponsored a course of lectures and a series of round table discussion on the subject within a year.

For it is of supreme importance to agriculture, to industry, to manufacturers, to commerce, to municipal planning, to statecraft, and to health that we should know of the population trend and plan accordingly.

PROTEINS AND STARCHES.

C. J. W. writes:

1. Is it wrong to eat a protein and a starch at the same meal?
2. Does not the starch with the saliva constitute an alkaline medium in the stomach?
3. Likewise, a protein with gastric secretions of the stomach constitute an acid medium?

REPLY.

1. No. Bread is a mixture of a protein and a starch. If you tried not to eat any foods which contained both starch and protein you would be limited to choice between very few foods.
2. The saliva is slightly alkaline but the acid of the stomach quickly neutralizes that.
3. Yes.

NOT WORTH EXPENSIVE CURE.

Mrs. M. J. writes: My daughter, who will be 9 years old, contracted a skin disease—psoriasis—at the age of 5 years. I have consulted many doctors and skin hospitals without any results. Now a doctor tells me if I will leave my daughter in his hospital for four weeks he will cure her. I have spent practically every dollar I had on trying to cure her.

REPLY.

Nobody is ever justified in spending practically her last dollar on the treatment of psoriasis. The disease does very little harm. It is not dangerous, it is not followed by any disease, nor is it readily cured. I commonly advise people with psoriasis to bear the ills they have. I do not think you would be justified in putting the child in the hospital.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. R. L.

WHERE INVENTION FAILS.

Tom Edison has been at it again, and now this machine age, which we thought was already machined to the last drop, has something that will put all the hired men in the country out of jobs. Of course, milking machines are not new, but Tom has made one that will milk fifty cows at a time. When we think of milking fifty cows all at once we, who in our checkered boyhood had to milk the family cow, stand appalled. One cow was all we could manage, and we thought that if we got a bucket of milk from old Cherry without her flicking her tail in our face and gouging out our right ear we were in luck. Then we had to see to it that Cherry didn't put her foot in the pail about the time that it was half full. The family always got rough when we reported that Cherry had put her foot in the pail. Sometimes she put both feet in the pail; she was bad, that cow, bad and dissolute, and it was hard to make her behave. But now Tom Edison's new machine will milk fifty cows at once and probably has some sort of an attachment that will keep them from putting their hind legs in the pail. It's a grand idea, but we'll bet one thing; betcha Tom hasn't invented any way to teach a calf to drink. For in spite of all the vaunted progress machines are making every day, the method of teaching the dear little calves to help themselves to the free lunch remains the same as it was when Julius Cæsar or Bill Shakespeare or George Washington was a boy. That is to deceive the dear little calves by reaching the hand down into the milk and wriggling the fingers enticingly out of it. The darling little calf, when he discovers he has been cruelly deceived, always retaliates by filling his cunning little mouth full of sweet, warm milk and blowing it up teacher's sleeve. Or, if teacher was cunning enough not to wear a coat, then the smart little calf sprays the mouthful of milk all over him. When Tom Edison invents something to teach a little calfkin to feed its fool self without starting a general rough-house—then we'll admit the machine age has reached its zenith.

TWO DEAD.

(One man and another muse.)

Thunder on, you damned impertinent noise!
Thunder on, and wring my wilted heart!
Thunder on—perhaps it brings you peace;
your soul's voice is living. Mine is dead.

He lies contented six great feet beneath.
He cannot hear the children of his heart singing exultation to a crowd of eager eyes and clean uplifted faces.

Here am I, my very soul in anguish:
my body tense, eyes closed, and ears trained taut to hear what I came bearing to the earth, and nothing there. No sound. Not anything to gratify my empty ears, my heart so torn with courage and so tired of fear.

He does not hear. I hear. And yet hear not.
I listen to an emptiness more blatant than all the drum-beats of ten thousands drums pounded on with hammers, rhythm-slow.

And there he lies and here I stand alone.
The dead know not and cannot even care.
JEANNE DELAMARTER.

"'FOOL!' a policeman cried as he seized the would-be assassin of Japan's premier by the neck and wrenched the revolver from him."—Yesterday's Trib. How polite those Japanese are! Gosh, a Chicago cop says worse than that to us if we run five feet past the red light.

AND NOW it seems that Mr. Alfonse Capone has started a free soup kitchen in Chicago and is feeding a couple of thousand homeless people every day at an expense of something like twenty-one hundred dollars a week. And Al's kitchen not only feeds the hungry hot soup but also coffee and doughnuts, and Thanksgiving day Al is going to serve turkey. And just when we were going to reprove Mr. Capone quite sharply for expediting the demise of rival gangsters we are confronted with the picture of hungry men getting three meals a day at his free kitchen. It is indeed most embarrassing.

The Linebook Commission Will Consider the Matter.

Dear Dick: Why should the Prof.—however learned or highbrow he may be—say "to please only one" in asking for "Mother's Memory Quilt" in the new Linebook? I myself asked you for it long ago, and tho' the Prof. may be a connoisseur of beauty, he isn't the only one of us who loves the music of Colorado Pete's haunting poems. To one whose only contact with the world is through the radio or the printed page they are like bits of old tapestries, organ melodies, mellow, rich wine, or old world gardens—things of which I can only dream now. And though, knowing that you cannot include all of his poems in the Linebook, I have made my own "Colorado Pete Linebook," I do hope you did not fail us on "Mother's Memory Quilt." There are a host of us, I know, to whom even the Linebook will not be altogether perfect if that lovely tender poem has been left out.
LITTLE GRAY MOTHER.

WE DON'T UNDERSTAND this at all. Mr. Secretary of Commerce Lamont, speaking in Chicago Thursday night, allowed that the nation was shaking off its depression. That's what he said, and yet stocks went higher yesterday—well, a little higher. But that's strange! When any one from down Washington way says that prosperity is about to leap out from behind the corner the stock market always goes down. Well, they're obliged to be right some day if they keep at it.

SILENCE ALONE.

There is no utterance for love or death;
Words cannot speak for grief or ecstasy;
They must stand by like impotent pale ghosts
When hearts are blest or stricken verily.

No eloquence is adequate to tell
Of beauty; man is mute as any clod
Of earth before an elemental truth;
He has no word that gives a hint of God.
Silence alone is great enough to hold
A thing so real it never can be told.
ADELAIDE P. LOVE.

LAGNIAPPE.

AL SMITH'S going to write a colyum. We welcome Al to the ranks of the columnists and predict a bright future for him. But at that we don't think he will be as funny as Cal Coolidge.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 15, 1914.

LONDON.—Field Marshal Earl Roberts died last night in France from pneumonia. The telegram from Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary forces on the continent, apprised Earl Kitchener secretary of state for war, of the death of England's great soldier. Lord Roberts, who was colonel in chief of the Indian troops, had gone to France to give them his greetings. He was 82 years old, the most popular military figure in Great Britain and a national hero without rival in the affections of the people. "Little Bobs," a name popularly bestowed almost a generation ago, was born in 1832 at Cawnpore, India, the son of another famed Indian fighter.

CHICAGO.—John T. McCutcheon, THE TRIBUNE cartoonist, took luncheon with Lord Roberts at the general's country seat, Englemere, near Ascot, on Oct. 22 and probably made the last sketch from life of the famous soldier. [Mr. McCutcheon's sketch of "Bobs" appears on page 1 of today's TRIBUNE.]

CHICAGO.—THE TRIBUNE announces the following advisory committee which will supervise its work in bringing war orphans from Europe for adoption by families in the United States: Dr. W. A. Evans, chairman; Merritt W. Pinckney, judge of the juvenile court; Mrs. Arthur Aldis, L. Frederick Huppel, W. S. Reynolds, Mrs. Adolph Kurs, W. H. McGillivray, S. C. Kingsley, Homer Folk of New York, Miss Mary Bartelme, Miss Brickell Holmes. The war orphan bureau has been swamped by letters, telephone calls and visits from people whose hearts have been touched by the stories of the little children who are innocent victims of the great war.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 15, 1900.

LONDON.—The czar of Russia is quite a sick man. Influenza, which first caused his majesty to take to his bed, has developed into typhoid fever. The Czarovitch Michael, heir to the throne, left Copenhagen for Russia.

NEW YORK.—The remarriage of divorced persons probably will be forbidden by the next general conference of the Episcopal church, which meets in San Francisco in October, 1901. Nine eminent clergymen and laymen of a committee appointed in 1898 met today and formulated three new canons on marriage and divorce, and it is believed they will be accepted.

NEW YORK.—Tapestry costing half a million dollars hides the walls of the marquee which J. Pierpont Morgan has built for the wedding feast tomorrow of his favorite daughter, Miss Louisa Pierpont Morgan, at his home in Madison avenue. Every art gallery in Europe is represented in the decorations. Miss Morgan's marriage to Herbert Livingston Satterlee will be celebrated in St. George's church in the afternoon. Her trousseau cost $60,000.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 15, 1880.

STELLARTON, Nova Scotia.—Repeated explosions occurred in the Ford mine, the scene of last Friday's fearful calamity in which many miners were killed or entombed. It is known that an immense fire is raging in the mine and it is planned to turn a river into the shaft to extinguish the flames.

LONDON.—A Ballinrobe dispatch says: "The general opinion is that it will be absolutely necessary for Boycott to leave the country as he will have to be protected if he remains in Ireland." It is reported that great preparations will be made for the protection of the Orangemen on their departure from Lough Mask when their task of saving Boycott's crops is completed. A long train of army stores arrived at the camp under the escort of cavalry and infantry. The scene at Boycott's farm represents one of the most remarkable events in the history of Ireland.

NEW YORK.—Clergymen of this city are already kicking against the scheme to represent the Oberammergau "Passion Play" at Booth's theater. Among those strongly opposed to the plan are the Rev. Drs. Henry C. Potter, John Hall, Thomas Armitage, J. F. Newman, and Edward McGlynn, and the Rev. Robert Collyer,

FOR FEWER CHARITY DRIVES.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—In my judgment there are entirely too many charity drives going on and something should immediately be done to concentrate the work—and the appeals for help—to a limited number of established charities—such as the Catholic, Jewish, and United Charities, the Salvation Army, and the Red Cross, who by long experience are able to quickly eliminate the unworthy applicants. Too many hard working people who at best are only able to make ends meet by considerable self-denial are being unduly "influenced" by enthusiastic but misguided drives to make "voluntary" donations which they can ill afford, and others more comfortably fixed are beleaguered from all sources to make endless donations, many of questionable character.

I don't doubt but what there are many deserving people who need help, but these are the very people who are not helped by charity drives because they are too proud to let their situation become known. There are exceptions, of course, but the established charities—who are receiving warm support—should care for them and are prepared to do so. An honest person actually in need of help should apply to one of these established charities and if an investigation proves he is deserving he will get help. Instead the papers are full of appeals and every church and lodge and association and club and what-not wants help to support the charity seekers which they have undertaken to tide over the winter; and it is my honest opinion that the great majority of these "unfortunates" are the type who won't help themselves.

When I was a kid in school I, too, got up at 4 o'clock winter mornings to deliver papers and many a night I, too, went to bed hungry. I, too, "struggled" through night school to complete my education. My mother, too, worked in a store all day and at home way into the night washing and mending, and what-not to keep both herself and her two boys looking presentable. She, too, could have been sick, many a time, but she did not dare be sick. I sometimes wonder now how we ever pulled through, but we did it because we had some guts—which is largely a question of one's mental attitude.

Life is simply playing to the best of one's ability the cards dealt. Every one can't get a pat full house or a hundred aces. Did we ever seek charity? Certainly not; we were too proud to admit the truth and no one ever found out our real condition. False pride? If so, it is the same false pride which today prevents these drives in the name of charity reaching most of the decent self-respecting people, who only ask for work—any kind—and who scorn charity if offered. The other kind we shall always have with us, but let the established charities take care of them and let's eliminate some of these misguided drives for funds which are unjust to many hard working men and women and a nuisance to most of us. Every effort—public and private—to provide work should be encouraged, but let's keep away from this hysteria in the name of charity. "Real philanthropy is the kind which makes philanthropy unnecessary." FAIR PLAY.

WHY LEVINSKY WON.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Now that the Levinsky-Slattery battle has passed and sufficient time has elapsed for those who bet on the loser to forget the loss of that money, maybe the facts in the case will come out.

Anybody who knows boxing or even follows it to any extent will have to admit that Levinsky was entitled to all points for aggressiveness and they count in a decision; the only thing left in the fight then was the retreating footwork of Mr. Slattery and we can all concede him the honors there. Also, his left jabs would have been point makers providing that they were administered with the proper side of the gloves, but who will say that a boxer can gain points for a decision by using the string side of his glove?

In conclusion, I will say that the only way for the fans to become satisfied with decisions in boxing, football, basketball, etc., is for them to learn the rulings of each affair and then they will not be so critical of decisions made honestly by men—capable men—who really do know the rulings.

THE ALTERNATIVE.

Dixon, Ill., Nov. 10.—I have blamed THE TRIBUNE for being wet, but have changed my mind. Since prohibition does not prohibit, neither is it possible to legislate what people shall drink, why not recognize these facts and choose the lesser evil of government control? If the government should regulate the manufacture and sale of pure liquors at a reasonably low price, it would put the bootlegger and moonshiner practically out of business. Knock out the profit and they will die a natural death. Government control will stop the indiscriminate sale to our boys and girls, which, under present conditions, has no regulation or restriction whatever. The propaganda that saloons will return in event of repeal is not justified, as popular opinion and sentiment is against them, but the Canadian plan of distribution is favored by many; at least it would be an improvement over present conditions.

BUS COMPLAINT.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—How long is the patient public going to stand for the outrages perpetrated by the north side bus company? Their one man buses certainly never were designed with an eye to comfort, as the aisles are so narrow one person can hardly get through and it is almost impossible for two people to pass; they are so low even a tall woman is uncomfortable, not to mention a tall man.

In these hard times when so many men are out of work the bus company certainly has done nothing to help the situation, as by their one man buses they are depriving many men of a job.

When the one man kind break down, which quite often happens—no transfers are issued, but you have to take a bus of the same number, regardless of the fact that buses of another number are half empty. I would suggest that transfers be issued when these breakdowns occur so that the public may have some consideration given them. S. H. S.

Willie Graham (interpreter): "Now, gentlemen, everything is ready for signing the Tariff Truce, and I hope it is clear to every one present that while you all promise not to increase the size of your weapons for the next five years, my friend here agrees not even to use his bow and arrow during that period. SYNOPSIS.

Sheila Fay married King George despite the opposition of her uncle and guardian, John Bowlton, and her former suitor, Jim Molloy, and disapproving friends.

King, known as "the wild boy of Harvard," must wait several years before receiving the principal of the fortune left by his father, Joshua George, of chewing gum fame. Before the honeymoon is over Sheila discovers her husband is a drug addict. She determines to fight for his regeneration. A federal narcotic agent suggests a program, which if rigidly adhered to would effect a cure.

King promised Sheila to go with her to Alaska, after the races at Tia Juana, where King rode his favorite horse, Wind. Sheila plans to kidnap King and take him to a remote spot, there to help him fight off his baneful habit. Jim Molloy is living in Nome and he promises to help her. At breakfast in Jim's cabin, King's coffee is drugged and Molloy in the heart of the frozen wilderness. Jim leaves them his servants, an Eskimo couple, and returns at once to Nome. When King regains consciousness and learns he is trapped for the next eight months his fury breaks in verbal abuse on Sheila, accusing her of wanting to get him out of the way. He tries to bribe Hi-Jack, the Eskimo servant, to go to Nome for him. Failing in this he tries to escape on snowshoes. Hi-Jack goes in search of him. King is saved by the timely arrival of Pere Le Clerc, a missionary, sent by Jim Molloy to call on Sheila. The priest begs Sheila to let him take King to the station, but she refuses to abandon King.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

A DERANGED OBSESSION.

Once it had been a fine voice, Sheila divined; though reduced and tremulous, it was still true and sweet. Music, she knew, had meant much to him. The head which changed the records trembled with eagerness, or was it chagrin? She wondered what his life had been before he entered the church; and what had sent him to the wilds. . . .

"It is not that you are kind, madame, I would say polite, that you ask me for yet one more song?"

"We want as many as you will be good enough to give us, Pere la Clerc. It is a wonderful treat for us all."

He deliberated between several records. "I think—I see you have Estrellita. You like, Madame? It is maybe too steep for the ol' voice to climb, but I will risk the try."

The voice which had so securely carried the air of Madelon cracked audibly under the demands of the new selection. He broke off in the middle of a bar, and Sheila thought the concert ended, when a sound, sweet as a spring bird's singing, came from the corner where the old priest stood. Softer than a flute, but as clear, his whistling. Whistling Jim's song; he used to call her Estrellita, his little star of love. Long ago. When she was young. When she had strayed so far from youth and safety.

He had struck her, the tray crashed to the floor.

Estrellita del lejano cielo,
Que miras mi dolor—

Now more than those two lines of the Spanish song had Jim ever managed to remember. Always he had had to make a fresh start with the more English sounds.

Though a million twinkling stars are shining,
I watch for one alone, O little star of love!
O, my little star, so high, so far!

. . . . . .

Not Jim's song anymore, but Pere le Clerc's. It wasn't quite fair to Jim, keeping it Jim's. She must forget she was his distant star of love, as she must increase that distance. A woman can love two men, just as she loved Jim and King, but life doesn't let her prove it. "Men want you; just that." After awhile, distance dims the star, and the man who is no longer lights instead his candle to live by. . . . Whenever she played that record again she was going to see, not Jim's face, in the Hillsborough garden, but the French priest's, upturned as though to a listening gallery; she would see the snow packed window framing his close cropped head, his weathered face; she would see the crouching brown figures by the hearth, and watching them, from the couch, King . . . In every picture there would be King.

When the last notes died away Sheila asked would he be willing to whistle one more air for her? One song, she had found, fitted that northern land, had become for her the song of the north. "The Waters of Minnetonka." While he searched for the record, she could hear him humming:

"Moon-deer, no fear in heart of mine,"

"No fear in heart of mine," she echoed, prayerfully.

To the sweep of the harp strings, which sounded like rippling waters, his whistle carried the air that is little more than a call. Closing her eyes Sheila again stood on the snow covered slopes of Tallac; she heard the rushing waters; inhaled the fragrance of pines. . . . And a cone of incense, a steel pointed needle, had wrought the miracle!

The priest spoke to her; he had come to her chair. "Madame is fatigue'. She mus' sleep now."

When she begged him to go on whistling, singing, sturdily he refused. "An' your husban', he, too, need to sleep."

After she had helped Casino fashion a bed on the floor, insisting over the priest's protest to give him her upper mattress, she murmured, when saying good night, "In the morning we will ask him, Père la Clerc."

He bowed over her hand; again the Parisian. "In the morning, madame, Pere le Clerc will go back to Kruz-ga-mapa mission alone."

. . . . . .

The next day, after the priest had left them, the silent figure on the bed in the far corner kept his eyes fixed on the ceiling, on the wall. The meals brought to him, by Sheila, by Casino, were scarcely touched. When his wife spoke to him a strange expression came to his eyes. "Trapped," thought Sheila. "He's planning a different sort of escape. But how . . . ?"

She was aroused that night by clumsy movements in the darkened room. Something which sounded like a shoe falling to the floor wakened her. She heard King get back into bed; she heard his snuffling. . . .

His new method of release was obvious the next morning. His compassion could comprehend the panic which was determining the increased self-indulgence; the desperate squandering; the air of bravado. There was not enough of what he thought he must have in order to live in those locked bags of his, or hidden away in his clothes? "Therefore," she knew he was thinking, "why heard it? Live to the full as long as it lasts!"

As she knew, too, when the shattering fear would halt him: "What shall I do when the last jolt is gone?" Back and forth, back and forth, swept the pendulum of decision. Pitifully his wife would watch him striding to the corner where now the curtains were kept drawn; she would look away from him when he returned, crestfallen, pausing at the cigaret box; she would sit, shivering, when he lingered behind the curtains, silent, a long time silent, lying on his couch. And this was her splendid King!

Came a morning when neither checkers nor chess, poker nor radio could divert him. Casino's meals were neglected. Up and down the room he paced, until Sheila's nerves were frayed. Before the hours of daylight passed he himself was exhausted. He threw himself in the chair by the hearth, smoking furiously, and hurling with passion each half used cigaret on the flames. His fingers were twitching; the muscles of his face were drawn. As though he were hungry, sorrowed Sheila; as though he were starving! Suddenly he startled her by jumping up, flinging the pipe he had just filled across the room.

He stood for a moment, glaring at her. Hating her. His jailer. Hating her.

"Damn you!" he cried. "Have it your way."

And the orgy began. . . .

It was not King, the gentleman, who lay on the couch that night, but a dishevelled, dull eyed sot. . . .

The third day of the debauch his wife was removing from his bedside stand the untouched tray, when her sleeve brushed a bit of twisted paper to the floor. Before she could get out of his way he was on his feet, hitting her wildly. He had struck her. . . . The tray crashed to the floor. Sheila was flung through the curtains, clutching them ere she fell. King did not turn to help her; for he was on his knees, scratching up and sniffing the scattered precious powder. . . . King. Not a man, A beast. . . .

Sheila broke into wild laughter. The little brown woman came to her side, in alarm, but was pushed away. King, startled for a moment into speech, was laughed down.

"Not good now, laugh so hard," whispered Casino.

She was regaining her control when she caught a look of doubt pass from Happy Jack to Casino; so the white woman's mind was sick too?

The storm ended in a passion of weeping. The anxiety of the Eskimos was instantly relieved. When one is glad, or rich, one laughs; when one is sad, or angry, no. And so the white woman cries that way? Humph! Well then, they could go to bed.

"No," said Sheila.

Again they squatted by the fire, waiting. Again they heard the white man unlocking his bags, and snuffing; and again; and again.

Good morning!

The cozy Orpheum theater has been closed for a couple of weeks getting itself all done over. Now, charmingly redecorated, it has thrown open its doors again, and invites you to witness, amidst the pleasantest of surroundings, a new gangster picture.

The "widow" from Chicago is, really, no widow at all. She's the revenge-thirsty sister of a murdered detective, who poses as the relict of one gangster to get the goods on some others.

The title rôle calls for a brassy lady who fears no man, and can talk right up to the toughest gazabo in his own language. Miss White fills the part admirably. As the Widow Dorgan, she is pert, saw-voiced, shrewd and hard as nails, and beats the sinister crook Dominic at his own game. Dominic is excellently depicted by Edward Robinson, who specializes in characterizations of undesirable citizens. In real life he's probably a home man, whose greatest vice is playing the radio too loudly, but on the screen he's just a little serpent, that's all.

Neil Hamilton isn't so convincing as Dorgan, who, supposed to have been gathered unto his fathers, returns to confound the maid who ne'er had been his blushing bride but has taken his weeds upon her. He tries with all his might and main to be a hard boiled egg—and only succeeds in making you think of a little boy playing bandit in the back yard. Other rôles are handled with vim and some ability.

The picture features a murder, a stickup, and a lot of funny business in the café run by Dominic. You go behind the scenes with rival bootleggers and learn how dangerous a woman can be who knows how to do tricks with a telephone. Considerable suspense and a couple of surprises, add perkiness to the action. Director and photographer have done well by their subject and the dialogue, while not anything to turn handsprings about, rings true in a number of places.

Since we must, it seems, have gangster films, and gangster films and then more gangster films, let's hope we'll never have any worse ones than "The Widow from Chicago."

"WHICH WAS FIRST, HEN OR THE EGG?" EINSTEIN ALSO PUZZLED

BERLIN, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Dr. Albert Einstein, originator of the relativity theory, lectured on the laws of cause and effect tonight before a crowd of young radicals assembled in Humboldt hall, where the busts of former German emperors looked down on the proceedings.

Herr Einstein touched on the metaphysical and psychological aspects of causation, beginning with the ideas of primitive peoples, who are able to conceive only an "animistic will cause," or who, in other words, believe all happenings are directly caused by a thinking agency, human, divine, or demonical. He said he saw nothing to prove that the world was "casual." As to the "first cause," he said, he couldn't even now tell which came first, the hen or the egg.

The audience tried to induce Einstein to answer questions regarding politics, but he parried their queries with jokes. He refused after the lecture to discuss with newspaper men his proposed American trip.

"Nein, nein," he exclaimed to the reporters, and threw up his hands and fled.

The hall was crowded to the point of suffocation by young seekers after knowledge. Most of them were from the Marxist workers' school in the industrial northern section of Berlin. Some of them had come straight from communist demonstrations against the lowering of wages.

The savant spoke informally and without using notes. For that reason he asked reporters not to take the speech down for publication verbatim.

He encouraged his young audience to ask question and not imagine they were foolish questions.

"For before God, we are relatively all equally wise or equally foolish," he remarked.

Willa Cather Wins Medal; Arliss Also Is Honored

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The American Acadamy of Arts and Letters today awarded four medals—two to women and two to men—for distinction in sculpture, fiction, good diction on the stage and good diction on the radio.

Willa Cather was awarded the William Dean Howells medal for her novel, "Death Comes to the Archbishop." Robert Grant, one of the academicians termed the book "inspired."

Mrs. Anna Hyatt Huntington won the medal for excellence in sculpture, which was announced in her absence by Lorado Taft. Hamlin Garland, dean of American authors, presented the radio diction medal to Alwyn Bach, while Prof. George Pierce Baker turned over a medal for diction on the stage to a representative of George Arliss, actor.

Mary Borden Talks of Books, Yankee, British

Tells What Both Publics Are Approving.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

British and American literary tastes are not necessarily things apart. Some of our authors are incomprehensible to the English public, but a good book is a good book for a' that, on either side of the Atlantic. So insisted that internationally popular, Chicago born novelist known to London and Chicago society as Mrs. Edward L. Spears, wife of a British brigadier general, and in the writing world as Mary Borden. Her talk yesterday in the book section of Field's drew a record crowd.

From her perspective as a writer of successful books, Mary Borden made some interesting points in her discussion of two of the three R's, "readin' and 'ritin'." But Mrs. Spears scored the success of the morning when she emphasized the fact that, though she is English by marriage, she is American by birth, and that it is inaccurate to describe her as an English novelist.

"There are American writers," she informed her hearers, "who are almost as well known in England as in America—Hemingway, Edna Ferber, Sinclair Lewis, and Thornton Wilder, whose 'Bridge of San Luis Rey' had a tremendous success in London. There are others whose language—the language of their thoughts—completely baffles the English. Fannie Hurst, for one, is incomprehensible to them. Carl Van Vechten's attitudes toward life are too unreal for them. And Sherwood Anderson's background is difficult for them to understand.

"Something of the same diffrence in viewpoint affected the popularity in England of Rita Sackville West's 'The Edwardians,' which is going very well here. The British, having lived through those years of King Edward's reign, not long before the world war, feel that the author has missed something of their real spirit, but Americans, not being familiar with those times, have liked the book.

"I was as surprised as I was pleased to find how well Somerset Maugham's 'Cakes and Ale' is selling in this country. I had really thought that his humor was too subtle, perhaps even too caustic, to appeal to Americans as much as it has.

"In my opinion one of the greatest books of the last few years is J. B. Priestly's 'The Good Companions,' which, though much longer than the average novel, has sold and sold and sold. My publisher told me of a few plots which, in some form or another, have been best sellers for 100 years. One was the plot of King Cophetua and the beggar maid, and the other the Odyssey. 'The Good Companions,' while it hardly could be called a Greek story, actually is a variation of that old classic, and is reaping the reward of appreciation that, I maintain, comes of every really good book.

"Graham Greene, a young London reporter who wrote 'The Man Within,' has had a big success with it and I believe shows great promise. Allen Herbert's 'Water Gypsies' failed to please many people, but to me it is one of the best written tales of recent years. Then we have, among our 'exquisites' (I hate the word highbrow) Virginia Woolf and David Garnett. In Germany, I hear, that Galsworthy is considered the one great English novelist, but in Paris he is ranked below Maurice Baring, author of 'Robert Peckham,' and other books.

"After all, though, publishers inform me that we novelists cannot expect the greatest volume of sellers. For instance, no novel in England this year, I believe, will have the successs of that true story of a great, humorous man, Winston Churchill's own story of his first twenty-five years, 'A Roving Commission.'"

PADEREWSKI PLAYS AND CROWDS FILL CIVIC OPERA HOUSE

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Paderewski, seventy years old, great personality, great artist, great man, appeared at the Civic Opera house last night before the largest audience that has ever come there. Not only was every seat in the great theater occupied by an enthusiast—this has also happened at the opera—but there was a stageful of extra patrons fenced off and just giving Paderewski room to get to his place.

And this for a piano recital!

His appearance was a harking back to former days for at least one in the audience. The first time that I ever heard him, more years ago than I care to tell just now, he played the Beethoven D minor sonata, the second number of last night's program. Not long afterward I studied the same work with a pianist who was a personal friend and warm admirer as artist and man of Paderewski.

Hearing him play it again last night was direct transportation back through the years. For time after time, in detail after detail, matters of shading, details of retards, of melody, Paderewski was doing perfectly what this other man had labored patiently to impress upon my own imperfect fingers.

And as he did with the Beethoven sonata, so he did with the Handel-Brahms variations and the Chopin B minor sonata. Then, having played steadily for an hour and five minutes, he decreed himself a short rest, at the end of which he returned to illustrate again his vast lore on a group of Chopin, a group of Debussy, two Rachmaninoff preludes, Ernest Schelling's transcription to the prelude to "Tristan and Isoldie," and the Paganini-Liszt "La Campanella."

None of the younger pianists would venture to play such a program. For that matter, very few of them could play it the way he did. Only among a few of the veterans will you find the mucic so thoroughly worked out. That sort of performance needs incessant practice, a great deal of thought, and, it may be added, a mind like Paderewski's.

He will be back again a month from last night at the same place.

Erika Morini, violinist, led off the season's list of soloists with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon, and incidentally hung up a mark for the others to shoot at.

When she played with the orchestra eight and nine years ago she was a brilliantly talented youngster. She is now a flaming adult virtuoso, with an ability that makes light of any combination of notes ever written down for the four strings and a soul that makes hearing them a delightful experience.

Glazounoff's concerto was chosen to mark her return to Chicago. It does not rank among the most popular works in violinistic lore, and there was no particular reason why it should until Miss Morini played it yesterday. But then it stormed the strongholds and brought them down. Wherefore Miss Morini is welcomed among the conquerors in music.

Mr. Stock introduced a new work, Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Pastoral" symphony. With the same composer's "London" symphony in mind, it aroused hopes, but it turned out to be an uncommonly drowsy affair. But Mr. Stock also conducted Beethoven's first symphony and the dances from Borodin's opera, "Prince Igor," and they are not in the least sleepy. On the contrary, they are thoroughly alive.

Good Fellows Help to Guard Family Life

Home Finding Agency Head Lauds Their Work.

The service TRIBUNE Good Fellows are performing for children by holding together family ties in the face of unemployment and want was called a greater service than that of any child caring agency yesterday by C. V. Williams, superintendent of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, a child placing organization.

If there is one golden rule practiced as well as preached by welfare groups it is: "Keep the family circle unbroken." Once a home is disrupted, the children placed out in institutions or private homes, it is almost impossible, Mr. Williams said, to reëstablish a permanent home again. And that is why social organizations make every effort to help a family regain its feet when luck has turned against it.

"Although we are proud of our homes for children, we can say frankly it is always an abnormal experience to be taken away from one's own parents," Mr. Williams said. "It is a cruelty for a child to have to leave home even to go into a richer home. A child at night wants his own bed and his own mother."

Mr. Williams blamed extreme poverty as the primary reason for many broken homes, and the necessary placement of boys and girls in institutions or foster homes.

"Although children are not taken out of impoverished homes by standardized agencies, extreme poverty drives fathers to desertion and mothers to acts they never would dream of doing under normal conditions. This results in the breaking of a home."

Mr. Williams illustrated with a case brought to the attention of the society only this week.

A mother, deserted, was found with two children, 4 and 6 years old, living in a community not far from Chicago. Her home was a one room garret, the doorless entry curtained against impostors and the cold only by an old comforter. The mother, who had every appearance of refinement, the social worker found, in order to provide for her children had turned to prostitution. The children are now in foster homes.

"All the work the Good Fellows are doing by making possible the tiding over of a family until better times is of greater value than the work of any society taking care of children," Mr. Williams concluded. "The general despair on the part of the people who can't get work is leading men to commit crime, permitting the breaking up of their homes. The Good Fellows by keeping the family together through the stress of hard times are doing the greatest of services to society."

The Illinois society reported that a number of foster homes which have taken the care of children from broken homes have been obliged to return the children to the care of the society, because the wage earner has been thrown out of work or has assumed the responsibility of relatives hit by unemployment.

Mrs. Catherine Shannon, head of the child placing division of the Juvenile court, said yesterday that more children from broken or unfit homes are coming to the attention of the Juvenile court than a year ago. Because of unemployment, she said, fewer homes are available as foster homes for those children.

Movie Group Here on the Way to New York

Jeanette MacDonald, golden haired motion picture actress of "The Lottery Bride," a current production in town, headed a small delegation of Hollywood's actors, arriving here on the Santa Fé Chief yesterday and departing a few hours later for the east. Miss MacDonald has just completed a new picture, "O, for a Man," and expects to start making "All Women Are Bad," upon her return from New York.

United Charities Obtains $57,000 Toward $1,150,000

Nearly $57,000 has been received in the first five days of the United Charities campaign to complete the $1,150,000 fund sought for immediate needs, is was announced yesterday. This does not represent the work of 2,000 members of the organization committee over the same period, Scott Brown, organization chairman, explained at a meeting of the trades group at the Hotel Sherman. There are about 600 members of the trades group and 1,400 volunteer workers from the churches and women's committees, he said, who expect to put the drive over its goal.

Debate Title: 'Bachelor Girl or Spinster?'

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Two of England's best known women are agreed that "old maid" is not the proper way to speak of an unmarried woman; but they are in dispute concerning a substitute.

Miss Ishbel MacDonald, daughter of the premier, said at the start of the unmarried women's exhibition today she preferred "bachelor girls."

Dame Louise McIlroy, noted physician, expressed a preference for "spinster."

"Women are entitled to be called bachelor girls," Miss MacDonald said, "rather than be regarded as failures in the marriage market. I am greatly annoyed when people, discussing some attractive girl, remark that she would 'make a good wife.' And they wonder why she doesn't marry.

"People don't seem to realize that a girl, because she is nice and has common sense, is not going to become a 'good wife' just for any one. Her choice has been much reduced by the war."

Many girls, she added, prefer professions now open to them, rather than the alternative of "humdrum married life."

"I don't mean that all married life is humdrum," she added, "but it may appear so to some girls, compared with careers and a bachelor life of their own."

Dame Louise described "spinster" as a "good old fashioned English word" much preferable to the modern term. She also expressed the opinion that there are many more "love marriages" now than there were in the Victorian era, because girls now are independent "and don't have to accept the first proposal."

She expressed approval of the use of cosmetics.

"Girls used to have either brains or beauty," she said. "Nowadays they have both."

Brooklyn Explorer Says Indians Use Ants as Antiseptic

PARIS, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Desmond Holdridge, 24 year old explorer and ethnologist, is back from Venezuela with a suitcase full of human bones and the tale of a "lost tribe" of Indians who spread live ants over their bodies to ward off illness.

Holdridge returned yesterday after spending seven months in the jungle gathering material for the Brooklyn Museum of Art and the American Geographical society.

The tribe, called the Pishaukо, was located after a twenty-five day trip up the Amazon river and the Rio Branco, and a six week trek on horseback.

Holdridge traveled alone, except for native guides, and he claims to be the only white man to set foot in the Pishaukos' territory—deep in the bush of southern Venezuela.

The Pishaukos, he explained, are a ferocious tribe and are continually at war with neighboring Indians. They practice self torture to end illness, he said.

Modern Times Have No Use for Lovelorn Who Idly Repines

BY DORIS BLAKE.

You would think that our girls, with all their emotional frankness and honesty, would be able to talk themselves, or better, laugh themselves out of a love that's been lost. But they, or a number of them, keep writing to know how they can regain the love of some man whose heart has gone elsewhere.

Why they can't apply some of their modern philosophy in such words as "My bad luck to ever have fallen for him," and let it go at that is something I wonder about—and wish would happen.

It's nobody's fault, therefore it shouldn't be anybody's tragedy to go through life, or even a brief period of it, attempting to regain a thing that has taken to its heels with the finality that a lost love always assumes. There is nothing quite so dead as a love that's gone cold. That's why we can see nothing but futility and unnecessary prolongation of pain in clinging to the idea of reviving an affection upon which the other has written finis.

It doesn't belong in our era to be nursing the pains of an unrequited love. It seems so thoroughly old fashioned that I am surprised that active, modern and broad thinking girls permit themselves to indulge in the pastime. With so many gay things they can do and so many other men they can play about with and who can make them forget, it is just rank folly to wear a look of the "beaten," which is the look Jean describes herself as having, since her Big Boy sauntered off to other pastures.

That's silly. As a fiction plot it might have served fifty years ago, but hardly today. There was a time when the woman jilted, while she felt shamed, still enjoyed the sympathy of her friends and family and the man was roundly abused to add to her satisfaction. But life moves too swiftly today for that sort of thing. Besides, there is supposed to be a broader understanding of love and its whimsical ways. And one is supposed to be a good sport when she is dealt the losing hand and to rally quickly and show herself anything but a has-been!

Clinging with desperate hands and more desperate hearts to men who are trying to break away just does not belong in our modern day.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Effusive Thanks Are Not Natural to Most Children

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Short reading references on child management will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The boy had been wanting the motor boat for months. He'd look at it in the glass case in the toy department. He'd make visits to the store again and again.

One gala day his father and he made a trip to the store and bought the boat.

They left the store and began their walk home, the boy carrying the heavy package himself. With each block the father grew more and more disappointed because his son had said nothing. At last:

"Don't think, dad, because I don't talk about it that I'm not crasy about it. I don't know how to tell you how I feel. If I could show my feelings I'd jump as high as that skyscraper and shout. . . . I can't always talk about things I like so much."

Unless you understand children pretty well you're apt to be sorely disappointed if they don't show their delight in a gift—or over some other pleasure like a trip or the granting of a long deferred wish. You're even apt to ask them, "Why don't you say something about it?" or "Can't you thank grandma and tell her how lovely it is?"

Some parents, when a child is given something, won't allow him time to look at a gift but will jump at him, thinking of manners and the feelings of grownups and say, "What's the matter with you? Can't you say something. Say thank you?"

But if you know children you realize that many of them are not apt to find verbal expression for their pleasure. It's a part of civilization, a social usage, to acknowledge a gift graciously, or to exclaim and rave as an expression of inner pleasure.

Children aren't entirely civilized. It's not natural to them to be effusive over gifts. "O, boy!" or "That's swell!" or—if it's your own child and you're alone—a close hug or a soft kiss or perhaps a rib-crushing squeeze should convey their pleasure adequately for your satisfaction.

DELIVER WORLD FROM "GRINDING POVERTY," PRAYER OF BISHOP

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—A prayer "for deliverance of civilization from grinding poverty and excessive riches" was issued today from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine to the clergy of Protestant Episcopal churches throughout the diocese of New York.

The prayer was written by the Right Rev. William T. Manning, in the interest of men and women out of work. It is designed "for use in the churches and by people in their homes."

The entire prayer follows:

"O, almighty God who hast blessed the earth with all that is needful for the life of man, give thy help and comfort to all who are in need and especially to those, our brethren, who are now suffering through unemployment; help us to do our part for their aid and relief; help us to realize our responsibility for the injustices of our social and industrial life; fill us with the desire to purify our civilization and make it truly Christian that we may be delivered from the evils alike of grinding poverty and of excessive riches; lead us into the paths of simple and upright living; take from us the spirit of covetousness and give us the spirit of service; show us the way so to order our lives as a nation that, receiving the just reward of honest labor, none may want, but each according to his need may share in thy bountiful provision.

"We ask this in the name of him who came into this world to show us the way of justice and brotherhood and love, thy son Christ our Lord."

Neebes Show Paintings at the Midland Club, Win Critics' Praise

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

In the Midland club there is an interesting exhibit of recent paintings by Louis Alexander Neebe and Minnie Harms Neebe. Both are doing themselves justice as never before. When one remembers Mr. Neebe's long and serious line it is little short of marvelous that he should have got back his old power with a brush.

There is great variety to the show. Possibly when it comes to making decisions as to best and second best that variety is even more marked. So many different subjects and manners are offered, it is nearly impossible to make a choice. Among Mr. Neebe's work, "Schrauta Mill," stands out as extremely able painting grounded on conviction.

His "Florida Growth" and "Cedar Trees" verge upon modernism in their direct appeal to pattern. The "Afterglow" and "The Brook" are charmingly picturesque. "Snowbound" is a realistic portrait of Chicago in January.

Mrs. Neebe offers a number of flower paintings. Most of them are rich in color and delightful in composition. They would be stunning over a fireplace or in a dining room above the sideboard. "Chesco's" is decorative in another way. It is an exquisite moment in a simple setting where the blossoms and winding stairs take on new importance under the artist's touch.

"A Sketch" is an intriguing color incident. "Bathing Beach" is charming in its vigorous flashes of bright hues. "Pear Blossoms" is exquisite, and "Boats" is as though an opal had been split its length and you were privileged to feast your eyes upon its shifting beauty.

The exhibition is one of the best in town at the moment and will continue through Nov. 22.

Group of 100 to Plan Budget for Children

BY THALIA

After due deliberation, the board of directors of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, has arrived at a decision about their annual fund raising efforts.

Rejecting all the previous methods they have devised, such as balls, horse-show and race track openings, drives and the like, by which they have provided for their budget, they have received a simpler scheme, one they feel is more fitting to this particular time.

A list of 100 citizens—a most exclusive list—is being compiled. Each is to receive an invitation to a private dinner to be given by Henry H. Porter at his residence at 1520 State parkway on the evening of Dec. 2.

The party will be, in effect, an emergency meeting to discuss the needs of the society. Judge Mary Bartelme is to tell of the vital assistance the organization is to her work with the Juvenile court. The guests will be expected to volunteer suggestions and finances. "It will be exactly the same as a private dinner," says Princess Clarissa Cantacuzene, who relays the news. "Nobody who isn't asked can come, and the only difference will be that everybody will bring his checkbook.

"In this way, we don't interfere with the other people who are having drives, campaigns, and so forth."

EVANSTON BRIDE

The program will include besides the fashion show, a one act play, "Nevertheless"; readings from A. A. Milne's "Christopher Robin," by Mary Agnes Doyle; and introduction of the cast for "Oliver Twist" which will open the sixth season of matinées for children next Saturday afternoon.

Miss Muriel Brown, who is in charge of the children's theater, will present the cast. The children taking part in the fashion show are Laura Moyer, Mrs. Robert Gray Peck's niece, Denye Root, Mrs. Ellen Root's daughter, Mary Seymour Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams, Annie May Henry, daughter of the Huntington Henrys, and Kay Sawyer Goodman, Mrs. Hopkins' daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Thomasson Jr., are to give a tea at their residence at 1325 Astor street this afternoon to present their niece, Miss Nelle Offutt, daughter of Mrs. Elwood Offut of Oakland, Md.

Miss Elizabeth Robbins Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Root Phelps of Highland Park, is to have a tea given for her this afternoon by her mother and her grandmother, Mrs. James Arthur Robbins.

Society will have to choose between three rival attractions tomorrow evening. The Arts club is to give a supper for Mary Borden Spears and her husband, Brig. Gen. Edward Louis Spears, preceding a talk by Mrs. Spears on "Literary London"; Admiral Richard E. Byrd is to give a lecture for the Infant Welfare society at the Civic Opera house, and the first of the season's hockey matches is to take place at the Chicago Stadium.

Mrs. John Alden Carpenter and her daughter, Miss Genevieve Carpenter, are to be hostesses at the guest table at the Arts club to a group including Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Mrs. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, Dr. and Mrs. James H. NEW YORK SOCIETY

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. John Henry Hammond will give a luncheon next Monday at her home for Miss Martha Berry, founder of the Berry schools in Mount Berry, Ga.

Countess Alfonso P. Villa had among her guests for luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Pierre Mrs. Donald O. MacRae, Mrs. Marjorie Gelricha, and Mrs. Truman Laurence Saunders.

Mrs. Valentine Macy Jr. gave a supper party last evening at the Central Park casino in honor of Count Volpi, former minister of finance in Italy, following a theater party in his honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Chadbourne, who have had a residence at Greenwich for some time, have taken an apartment at 307 East 44th street.

Mrs. James D. Foot and daughter, Miss Valeria D. Foot, gave a dinner dance tonight at the Ambassador for Miss Gladys A. MacDougall, daughter of Mrs. Alice Foote MacDougall, and her fiancé, Harry Montrose Graham, whose marriage will take place on Nov. 19.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Hoover has gone to Asheville, N. C., to make a short visit to her son, Herbert Hoover Jr., who is recuperating there. His wife is en route to their California home to bring their three children back to Asheville for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Guard of Chicago, who were overnight guests at the White House, left there this morning to return home.

The marriage of Miss Eppes Hawes, daughter of Senator Harry Hawes of Missouri, to Lewis Thompson Preston, son of the late Ralph Preston of New York, took place at noon today in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Curtis. Mrs. Curtis is a daughter of former Gov. William R. Merriam of Minnesota. The ceremony was performed at noon by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the house of representatives. A breakfast followed. The bride and bridegroom left for New York this afternoon. They will sail tomorrow for England. They later will go to Nairobi, Africa, for some big game hunting.

HOOVER BACKS WAR UPON ILLITERACY; STARTS NEAR CAMP

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 14.—(AP)—War on illiteracy was declared here tonight with the start of a nation-wide crusade by a national advisory committee appointed by President Hoover.

The campaign was opened at the annual convention of the West Virginia State Teachers' association, that state being the first to organize an advisory committee for that work.

Herbert S. Houston of New York, a member of the national group, said work started by Cora Wilson Stewart, Kentucky mountain teacher, to "make human beings alive with the light of knowledge," was to be continued and expanded. Mrs. Wilson also is a committee member.

Mr. Houston added that "over on the Rapidan" President Hoover found children with inadequate schools and grownups among his neighbors who couldn't read and write.

This Little Trick Will Remove That "Dowager's Hump"

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

With the formal evening frocks being the greatest holdup enigma of the moment, it looks as if much, much girl is going to be on exhibit winter evenings. I swear I've never seen such frail moorings as I saw at one dress exhibition. But how to hold 'em on isn't this department's business. We have enough troubles with the vertebra and what can happen to it in an average life span to even suggest the advisability of taking along a wad of chewing gum for emergency use.

One thing that can happen to a vertebra that started out in life a nice straight, respectable anatomical feature is a taking on of fat, forming what is colloquially known as the "dowager hump"—only dowagers haven't exclusive control of them. They're found on fairly young spines. And if two narrow shoulder straps are all they have to hide behind they are strictly out of luck.

Incidentally, in choosing a formal evening frock, it ought to be bought with eyes in the back of the head. The only purpose of exhibiting a great expanse of skin and bone and padding back there is to reveal an asset and the asset naturally enough is a good back. Otherwise, the same fine discrimination might be advanced in favor of a bit of covering as one applies it to a complexion not pleasing without makeup or to a past that were better left with the shade slightly drawn.

Backs worry me. Rather the ruthless and unwarranted way they are exposed without a good reason for the exhibition. Women compromise with style in other features of their dress.

But to get back to the dowager's legacy that you fall heir to along about the seventh vertebra, chiefly by the habit of holding the neck forward instead of straight up with head carried well and high.

If its' got a good start on you you will have to keep at exercises for a month, anyway, before you get the fat off and in the meantime you will have to train the head and neck to a better position. No use exercising if you are going to fall at once into the old head holding position. Any good bending from the waist movement will do. One especially good movement is to hold hands high over the head, bend forward at the waist; with hands still high over head, bend the body back at the waist. Repeat five to ten times. And between each movement lower hands to shoulder height and swing them back, trying to touch them behind back.

Wants Shorthand Book.

"I wonder if through your department of THE TRIBUNE I could get a copy of the eclectic shorthand book? I have been able to get an old copy at a second hand store, but it is quite different from the course I took.

"MRS. J. T."

If you studied this method of shorthand and still have the textbook—a fairly recent edition, however—won't you give it to this woman who is finding it necessary to return to the business world?

Flounces Give Tie-On Frock a New Version

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Paris fell in love with the tie-on frock last season, and though often accused of fickleness, she remains faithful to this old love, in spite of the many snares spread for her by the new. But there is good reason for this unwonted fidelity. The so-called apron frock can be becomingly adapted to any figure; its graceful folds eliminate that old argument about where to put the waistline, and it has that natural look that puts its wearer at her ease.

Jane Regny created the original version of the apron frock sketched here. She makes it of supple crêpe in her new blue, an indescribably lovely, medium blue, with just a dash of peacock. The bodice is joined to the skirt in a diagonal tunic line that descends in a point at the right side; it has a surplice closing and ties on the left hip. I don't need to remind you that this slenderising treatment makes you appear the shadow of yourself.

Wide cascade flounces of the blue crêpe, mounting vertically at either side of the skirt give it a brand new silhouette. A smaller one does a careless waterfall down the left side of the décolleté. The waist is kimono cut and has long, tight undersleeves and oversleeves finished with circular flounces split at the elbows.

The flower collar and earrings are of carved lapis-lazuli and silver.

THREE MEALS A DAY

From The Tribune Cook Book

BY META GIVEN.

Food Talk.

Why not give lettuce a little vacation and use instead curly endive while it is in season? The change will be appreciated and lettuce will be more interesting when you reinstate it on your table. For greens needed for salad there is no vegetable that grows more beautifully. The rosette arrangement of lovely curly sawtoothed leaves seem to have been intended solely for the artistic garnishment of a salad. Small wonder it is given preference in the preparation of the rarer salads in the best hotels and restaurants.

Just now endive is abundant and is as inexpensive as lettuce. The outer leaves which are not usually blanched may be combined with other herbs for the pot of greens or it may be cooked singly. The central creamy white portion may comprise the entire salad or it may be used in place of lettuce for the salad garnish or in conjunction with other vegetables in salad.

Endive is a favorite of many of the old settlers of Pennsylvania. The plant which grows in their gardens remains in the ground until late fall and is often protected from frost as long as possible in order that it may be had for the preparation of this particular salad. The salad is made of potatoes and endive. The pared and quartered potatoes are simmered until they are just tender. To ham or bacon drippings, vinegar, salt, and pepper are added, then the washed, shredded endive. This is turned over a few times to slightly wilt, then the mass is combined with the drained potatoes and allowed to stand over warm water for about five minutes to allow the vinegar to penetrate the potatoes. This is particularly good and makes an excellent main dish from a nutritive point of view. The combination of white and green is most attractive.

Another salad green that is now making its appearance on the market is erroneously called French endive. This is not endive at all but is Witloof chicory. This salad green is a plant forced in cold frames and greenhouses. It is beautifully blanched throughout. It comes in elongated, headlike bunches about six inches long and is usually packed in tissue paper in wooden boxes. The leaves are long and elliptical but are crisp, tender, and delicate in flavor. French endive seems to be the most expensive of all salad greens. It sells by the pound, however, and since it takes several bunches to make a pound, chicory is not as costly as it might seem. Try curly endive for every day salads and chicory now and then for company meals in which you wish to add the individual touch.

CANZONERI WINS TITLE; KNOCKS OUT SINGER

CHAMPIONSHIP IS N. U.'S GOAL IN WISCONSIN GAME

HAVE BADGERS REGAINED PUNCH OF MONTH AGO?

BY ARCH WARD.

This is the day north shore fans are to find out what kind of football team represents Northwestern university. There has been a suspicion this is the strongest eleven that has been developed at Evanston in years. Victory today will confirm it. The University of Wisconsin, seldom weak and always interesting, will provide the test.

It is no ordinary football game at Dyche stadium today. It has championship significance. Northwestern, with an unbroken string of victories, has a record that is painting the skies with its name. If Wisconsin can haul down the Purple flag, its tour of duty as host is done.

If Northwestern wins it will clinch a tie with the Big Ten title. Should Wisconsin upset Michigan the Wildcats will have undisputed claim to the championship. If both Northwestern and Michigan are victorious they will divide the honors.

Badgers Still Have Power.

A month ago Wisconsin was regarded as a robust title contender. It was before the Badgers lost a 6 point decision to Purdue. Then came a scoreless tie with Ohio State. Both previously had been bowled over by Northwestern. While the Wisconsin machine has been shaking and shivering like an ancient flivver on a frosty morn, there's a lot of punch left. Only last Saturday Coach Thistlethwaite's men ran up 58 points, their biggest total of the season, on South Dakota State.

Northwestern has come down to its final Western conference game with consecutive victories over Tulane, Ohio State, Illinois, Centre, Minnesota, and Indiana. Wisconsin has won from Clarkson, Lawrence, Chicago, and Pennsylvania, in addition to South Dakota State. It lost to Purdue and was tied by Ohio State.

Thistlethwaite's Homecoming.

This will be Thistlethwaite's homecoming. He never has led a team into Evanston since he went away in 1926 after having piloted Northwestern to a tie for the Big Ten championship. He lost a 7 to 0 game to the Purple last year at Madison. This is another day. Wisconsin has a more formidable eleven and there are plenty of Madison folk who think the 1930 team is about to make history. A crowd of 48,000, the capacity of Dyche stadium, will look on.

The Badgers have plenty of power both in the line and back field. The ball carriers are so numerous and so evenly matched that picking a regular combination has been difficult all season. When Behr, Lusby, Schneller, Walsh, Rebholz, Goldenberg and McGuire get going they cause plenty of trouble.

Northwestern's back field, which has been subject to numerous changes due to injuries and illness, has a versatile offense which has shown ability to gain both by forward passing and running.

Purple Passes Dangerous.

Wisconsin must stop the Purple passing game if it hopes to win. Minus the services of Pug Rentner, their sophomore full back who gained considerable repute as a forward passer, the Wildcats still will be dangerous in this mode of attack. Both Bruder and Hankey are good pass throwers.

The two lines are about a standoff. Both are rugged and neither has been found to give way to any opponent all season. The Badgers look to Gentile, Lubratovich, Smith, and Kruger to carry the battle to such redoubtable Wildcats as Marvil, Riley, and Beier.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Chicago Maroons and the Illini have known better days, but that isn't going to embarrass either this afternoon when they gather on Stagg field to add another chapter to their gridiron history which dates back into the dark ages of midwest football. If the class isn't there the spirit will be, and it's the latter that should lift the game above the level of just another struggle. Some 30,000 are expected to convene before the kickoff.

The Illini, although kicked around by four of the leading teams of the country, are conceded a chance to whip their ancient foe. The Maroons have been dieted for a week on inspiration, but whether that alone will be enough to let them salvage a bit of fleeting glory from an unsuccessful season is doubtful. The inspiration may have to succumb to Illinois' comparatively superior line, to its running attack and a fairly tight defense.

Chicago Handy with Pass.

Chicago undoubtedly will take to the air in its fight to outcount the best Mr. Bob Zuppke has been able to produce from Urbana's current crop of football talent. With Paul Stagg and Birney in the rôle of passers in their flanker style of attack, the Maroons have done fairly well to date. But their running game has yet to develop. If it does it probably will come from either Buzzell, who flashed with a touchdown against Purdue, or Knudson. The former is expected to be in the starting lineup this afternoon.

Zuppke upon arrival here yesterday of his 1930 grid edition, took the team to Stagg field for a final drill, which was unexpectedly light. He worked them just enough to stretch their muscles. That he didn't display any excitement over the impending affair might indicate he was satisfied that everything that could be done had been done or that he was not particularly fearful of having another defeat added to a string to which Northwestern, Michigan, Purdue, and the Army have contributed.

Russell Ready to Go.

"All I can say," spoke the mournful Zuppke, "is that we expect a close game. Whenever we play those Chicago teams we encounter that inspirational stuff and it has made things tough for us, even when we had better elevens. Neither Chicago nor the present Illinois team has the sheer physical strength to withstand superior elevens. That's why we've lost our four important games. Maybe the experience gained in these games will prove of value when we meet a team in our own class."

When he selects his eleven starting men this afternoon Zuppke can include Right Half Back Russell if he desires. The dashing sophomore was injured during the preparations for the Purdue argument and not only was out of that game, but was still on the bench at the Army encounter. If Russell starts Pete Yanuskus will be kept on the sidelines until an emergency arises. Of course, Berry is going to start at the opposite half, and he's the fellow the Maroons have been primed to watch.

Big Ten Games.

The Wake would like to be in three places today to see conference games. While Illinois and Chicago, meeting at Stagg field, do not class in strength this season with Northwestern and Wisconsin at Dyche stadium, or Michigan and Minnesota at Ann Arbor, it is difficult to forecast which of the three contests will be harder played.

Harve: Don't you think a Southern Illinois football team from a school of about 300 enrollment that went through 25 games without a defeat should get a gold football field or something? In 1928 they were scored on by only two teams; in 1929 not an opponent crossed their goal line. In 1930 they lost a game playing for the first time at night. This is the team from Sparta—yes, Sparta, also home of the Hunter brothers.

RUNS 80 YARDS TO SCORE ON KICKOFF TWICE IN MINUTE

Shubert, Neb., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Illinois had its Grange, Yale has its Booth, and Notre Dame will likely continue to have its Horsemen—but football minded folk in this section of Nebraska will tell you that Shubert High school's Mussen has made a performance for all the gridiron heroes to shoot at.

In Shubert's battle with the Talmage High school eleven here today Mussen took the opening kickoff and ran 80 yards to a touchdown. When the second kickoff came sailing his way he tucked the ball under his arm at approximately the same position on the field and galloped right down the gridiron to a second touchdown.

And in case you'd like to know, he did it all in less than a minute, the timer said.

GOPHERS BATTLE WOLVERINES FOR ONE BROWN JUG

Hold Kicking and Weight Advantage.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 14.—The Thundering Herd of Minnesota arrived this afternoon. After a brief drill on the practice field the Gophers camped for the night, ready to face Michigan on the morrow in the western conference game which will determine whether the Wolverines shall be champions.

Sixty-five thousand are expected to watch the combat, which not only carries the Wolverine title fate but determines the possession of one little brown jug, emblematic trophy of the long series between these rivals. Michigan brought the jug back to its niche in the trophy case last year by defeating the Gophers. Minnesota, infrequent victor over its rival, had taken possession in 1927 by virtue of Herb Joesting's plunging, which produced a 13 to 7 triumph. The teams did not meet in 1928.

Michigan Kicks Win.

Although Michigan has lost only two games in the series resumed after the war, the Gophers always have been worthy opponents. Twice Michigan's victories were by a point, and in 1920 a field goal was the margin of the conquest.

Michigan has won from three Big Ten foes this year—Purdue, Ohio State and Illinois. It has defeated Harvard, its intersectional rival, for a second successive season, and tonight the followers of the Maize and Blue were confident these victories should continue.

Michigan has no cause for apprehension. Every major opponent this year has outgained the Wolverines in running plays, but Michigan has a clean slate.

Michigan's line, the same which withstood Harvard's thrusts last week, will pit its experience, speed and weight against Minnesota forwards. It will have no advantage in one respect, as the Gopher line outweighs Michigan's by three pounds a player.

Michigan Team Outweighed.

Michigan probably will depend on its repertoire of forward passes, the bedrock of its attack. Harry Newman, sophomore quarter back, will again try to demonstrate his accuracy in throwing to Smirall, Wheeler, and Hudson.

From end to end, Michigan's starting line averages 192 pounds. Minnesota's line will average 195. Roy Hudson, Wolverine full back, weighs 190 pounds and largely is responsible for the back field average of 172. Jack

THE FALL OF A CHAMPION

BOSTON COLLEGE ELEVEN DEFEATS LOYOLA U., 19-0

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Some plain and fancy forward passing by a certain Mr. Colbert, combined with elusive running by Ceslaus Antos and Joe Kelly, gave Boston college a 19 to 0 victory over Loyola last night on the north side gridiron.

The above mentioned young men were abetted by a hard charging line which got the jump on the Loyola forwards repeatedly during the first half. Time and again the eastern boys stormed in to hurry passes or break up plays in the making, and it was well for them that they did their scoring early, for the Loyola eleven perked up considerably after the intermission and stopped the Boston running attack flatfooted.

The reversal of form is illustrated by the record of first downs, Boston making 7 in the first half to Loyola's 2, while in the latter part of the game the figures were transposed.

At the outset, the engagement gave indications of becoming a rout, for Boston scored three minutes after the first whistle. After an exchange of punts, Boston took the ball on its own 43 yard line. Antos ripped through for 15 yards and Kelly added ten on the next play. Three plunges and a penalty gave Boston first down on the 19 yard line and then Kelly shook loose around his own left end to cross the goal line untouched.

Loyola then stiffened and that was the last sustained assault on straight running plays. But Boston showed its versatility by taking to the air and scoring twice again with the aid of long passes.

The next touchdown came in the second quarter. Boston took the ball on Loyola's 45 yard line and three plays netted only about as many yards. On fourth down Colbert dropped back and shot a long pass toward Antos who pulled the ball out of the air on a dead run and was thrown on the five yard line. On the second attempt, Marr plunged over and Colbert added the extra point.

Another brilliant pass made possible the third Boston touchdown in the final quarter.

French Take Bike Race Lead in Night of Wild Jamming

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The largest crowd that ever saw a six day bicycle race in Chicago—15,000, including hundreds who turned away vowing never to attend another race when the admission prices were boosted last Wednesday—was on hand at the Chicago Stadium last night to view what old time cuckoos proclaimed the most insane night of riding ever witnessed in any of the 24 six day grinds held here.

Teams whirled in and out of the lead in frenzied abandon while the fans howled. There were plenty of spills and lap after lap was piled on the new world's record for stolen laps, which had been set in an unprecedented jamming session during the afternoon sprints, the first serious daytime jamming of the race. Up until midnight 608 laps had been stolen, 102 more than the previous record for an entire six day race.

French Team Takes Lead.

There was a four pix mileage tie at 12 o'clock, with De Nef and Charlier, Spencer and Dehaeta, Georgetti and Brocardo, and Letourner and Guimbretiere, the teams ranking in the order named on the point basis.

But the quadruple tie didn't last long. At 12:05 the French Red Devils tore loose and gained a lap to take the lead all by themselves.

The crowd was in a raucous mood all evening and nationalities were forgotten in the excitement of the jamming. Spencer and Hill, the American team, had been a favorite for 24 hours, but at 11:20 last night Hill fell, causing the abandonment of a big jam while Spencer and Hill were in the lead. The majority of the crowd got the idea that Hill had dived deliberately to protect their position. A Bronx cheer that rivaled the recent Levinsky fiasco victory went up. However, Referee Kramer said the demonstration was unjust in that Hill and his partner were about to be awarded another lap when the spill came.

How Lead Changed.

Here's the hourly "fluctuation table" of the race in last night's phase:

At 7 o'clock De Nef and Charlier were leading; Binda and Linari were second; Letourner and Guimbretiere third, under the point scoring, but tied in mileage. One lap behind were Mc Namara and Beckman, and Spencer and Hill.

At 8 o'clock the first five teams were in the same ranking, though the standing had been shuffled four times during the hour.

At 9 o'clock De Nef and Charlier still were leading on points, but were tied in mileage by McNamara and Beckman, Spencer and Hill and Georgetti and Brocardo. Binda and Linari were in fifth place, only a lap back, and Letourner and Guimbretiere, who had led at the opening of the evening's business, were in sixth place, also only a lap back.

At 10 o'clock Spencer and Hill were leading; Letourner and Guimbretiere were in second place and in a mileage tie with the leaders. De Nef and Charlier and McNamara and Beckman were back a lap in third and fourth places, respectively.

At 11 o'clock Spencer and Hill were leading all by themselves; Georgetti and Brocardo were in second place, one lap behind the leaders and in a mileage tie with the third place French team, Letourner and Guimbretiere. De Nef and Charlier were in fourth place, in a mileage tie with the second and third place teams.

At 12 o'clock the aforementioned four pix tie for the mileage lead existed, with De Nef and Charlier in the technical lead but tied in mileage with Spencer and Hill; Georgetti and Brocardo, and Letourner and Guimbretiere.

New Scoring in Effect.

At 2 o'clock this morning, the last day's scoring system went into effect, first in each sprint scoring 12 points, second 4, third 2, and fourth 1. The same system of scoring will be carried out in the ten sprints this afternoon, while in the last hour tonight between 10 and 11, there will be a sprint every mile with the points to score 72 for first, 4 for second, 2 for third, and 1 for fourth. At the end of the race the team with the most mileage will be declared the winner. In case two or more teams are tied in mileage, the points will be the deciding factor in scoring the winner of the race.

The 9:30 sprints resulted:
First—Crossley, Horder, Hill, McNamara.
Second—Sheehan, Walker, Bellosi, Spencer.
Third—Crossley, Charlier, Horan, Horder.
Fourth—Beckman, Walker, Peden, Bellosi.
Fifth—Crossley, Rockier, Charlier, Letourner.
Sixth—Peden, Walker, Walthour, Sheehan.
Seventh—Dehaeta, Linari, Hill, Charlier.
Eighth—Peden, Walker, Spencer, Guimbretiere.
Ninth—Horder, Spencer, Georgetti, Binda.
Tenth—Linari, Dehaeta, Horan, Walthour.

TONY WALLOPS OFF AL'S CROWN IN 66 SECONDS

17,000 See Fight in Garden Ring.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 14.—A new red fighting glove whipped Al Singer on the jaw in the first round of his fight with Tony Canzoneri in the Garden tonight and Singer flopped to the floor amid a small puff of gray dust, knocked out in his first appearance as defender of the lightweight championship which he won last summer in almost the same manner from Sammy Mandell.

One minute and six seconds after the sharp jangle of the opening gong Singer was an ex-champion, and Canzoneri, an old man of the ring with seven years of fighting behind him at the age of 23, was bounding about the ring, kicking up gusts of resin powder in joyous antics.

A short left hook clipped Singer as they parted after a cautious embrace and he plunged to the floor in a queer collapse.

As in his fight with Jimmy McLarnin, who knocked him out in the first round of a nonchampionship bout in August, Singer lay on his face, pawing at the back of his neck for the first few seconds of the count. As the knockdown timer's gavel beat for the seventh time on the wadded margin of the ring and Johnny McAvoy, the referee, stooped low to howl the count in the fallen boy's ear, Singer rolled to his back and began twitching his legs to place his feet beneath him.

He was up and teetering at the count of ten and lurched backward a couple of strides to the ropes, where he fumbled drunkenly for his balance and wound up outside the ring. There his legs again gave way and he settled to the floor again, by Canzoneri's corner. Sammy Goldman, Canzoneri's manager, reached a hand down to him and his own handlers scurried across to lead him back to his corner, as the crowd of 17,000 in the late Tex Rickard's temple babbled in amazement over a mystifying happening too sudden for understanding.

Singer Knocked Groggy.

The blow looked trifling, a perfunctory whip of the left hand from a fighter who has serious trouble hobbling his own with much less pretentious performers. Yet Singer was knocked absent from his senses for a much longer time than it took the referee to count him out, for even when he left the ring, amid a yowl of abuse from the crowd, several minutes later, his eyes were glazed, his chin was slightly agape, and he was not recognizing friends. Benny Leonard, who had coached him for his fight with Mandell last summer, stopped him in the aisle to commiserate him, but Singer merely dropped a limp boxing glove into his grasp and called him Ike.

The pawing gesture at the back of his neck suggested that McLarnin had hurt him permanently in flooring him twice with hard driven right hand blasts on the jaw. That night Singer lay on the floor, face down, kicking his toes into the wadding and clenching his neck with both gloves in apparent agony.

This evening a small poke of a wandering left hand set him to grabbing at his upper vertebrae again.

At any rate, Singer lost the title in one of the briefest lightweight championship bouts ever fought. Joe Gans beat Frank Erne in 54 seconds and Mandell lasted a few seconds longer against Singer than Al survived against Canzoneri tonight.

The Garden firm, convinced that vulgar commercialism is a detriment to the sport, no longer announces the gate receipts but, with the house almost full and the tickets scaled gradually downward from a maximum price of $10, the evening's loot for the dwindling company of millionaire stockholders was estimated at about $60,000.

Best People Present.

The attendance was one of those special turnouts, too, for there had been a social jollification of the stockholders and a selected company of the best people on private premises prior to the main bout. They came down the aisles to their seats with a glare of boiled shirt fronts that almost snow blinded the lay customers, just in time to see history do an act.

Bobby Jones, up from Georgia for a football game, sat in for an eyeful and went away with a glimpse.

Canzoneri weighed 133 pounds and Singer 134.

The fight seemed quite legitimate and Singer had won and lost his championship in less than three minutes of action.

NOTRE DAME AND N. U. ALL SET FOR CHARITY GAME

President Scott Writes Father O'Donnell.

Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, expressed his gratification at Notre Dame's acceptance of the plan to transfer their 1931 football game from South Bend to Soldiers' field, Chicago, in a letter sent yesterday to the Rev. Charles L. O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame. The sum of $100,000 will be deducted from the proceeds of that game to reimburse Northwestern for that amount, to be turned over to Gov. Emmerson's unemployment fund this year.

President Scott also sent a letter yesterday to Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board, with regard to the change in dates. The board had previously offered the use of Soldiers' field free for Nov. 22. President Scott asked the use of the field under the same conditions for Oct. 10, 1931.

President Scott's letter to Father O'Donnell follows:

"My dear Father O'Donnell:

"Your letter just recently is the source of very great gratification. I am very glad that you brought out in your letter certain interpretations, all of which we accept and make them a part of our general understanding. Your interpretations, however, might be extended just a little further.

"You are quite right in suggesting that Notre Dame should share in any credit that goes to either of us for the funds that are being provided for charity. In our statement we will be careful to give credit to Notre Dame.

"Northwestern university assumes full responsibility for the $100,000 to be advanced in the immediate future. We do not ask Notre Dame to share this venture.

"The fund for charity beyond the $100,000 now being advanced should as you say be distributed to charity in a manner mutually agreeable to Northerwestern and Notre Dame if the governor's commission is at that time not active.

"Inasmuch as the Northwestern-Notre Dame for 1932 is to be managed by Notre Dame and played at South Bend we assume that the 1931 game played in this community is to be under the management of Northwestern university.

"Looking forward to the pleasure of seeing you at the game and at my home Nov. 22, I am,

"Sincerely, yours,

"WALTER DILL SCOTT."

"NOTRE DAME'S GAME"—ROCKNE.

Knute Rockne last night said the 1931 game between Northwestern and Notre Dame had been scheduled for Notre Dame and for that reason saw no occasion for granting Northwestern control of the 1931 contest, which Notre Dame has agreed to transfer to Soldiers' field.

"I had a verbal agreement with Tug Wilson and Dick Hanley to play the 1931 and 1932 games at Notre Dame," Rockne said. "We are to play in Evanston in 1933. I don't think Wilson and Hanley will go back on their word. We always have had very pleasant relations."

Mr. Wilson said it was his understanding that the 1932 game was to be played at Evanston, but was confident the matter would be adjusted when Rockne visits Evanston today to attend the Wisconsin-Northwestern game.

President Scott's letter to Mr. Kelly follows:

Nov. 14, 1930.

"Mr. Edward J. Kelly,
President, South park commissioners,
57th street and Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Ill.

"My dear President Kelly:

"We had hoped to accept your invitation to hold the Northwestern-Notre Dame game at Soldiers' field on Nov. 22, 1930. It has, however, proved to be impracticable. We should appreciate it if you could change the date for which the invitation was extended from Nov. 22, 1930, to Oct. 10, 1931.

"Since this is to be a charity game in the sense so adequately described in Father O'Donnell's letter of Nov. 13, a copy of which is attached herewith, we desire to make the income the largest possible. Although the original invitation did not specify details, am I right in assuming that you granted to us the management of the game, including concessions, programs, ushering, etc.; and are we also correct in assuming that you included in your generous offer all necessary police protection, and such other services as are necessarily involved in the use of Soldiers' field?

"We fully appreciated the unselfish spirit which prompted your original invitation, and we trust that in our request for a change of date we are not presuming too much upon your generosity. Sincerely yours,

"WALTER DILL SCOTT."

PLUMAGE WINS LATONIA RACE; KENSHAW IS 2D

Latonia, Ky., Nov. 14.—(AP)—Plumage, a 2 year old filly by Ballotglyn, from the Gallaher and Combs stable, won her first race of the meeting today when she outstepped her field to easily win the Dahlia purse, the best offering on a card composed wholly of claiming races. Kenshaw from D. D. Canfield's stable was second, with Ben Blair from J. O. Whitlow's stable third.

The race was run over the mile and 70 yards journey and was for 2 year olds. It was worth $900 to the winner. She ran the distance over a heavy track in 1:48 2-5 and paid off at $12.30 to $2 in the mutuels.

Kentucky Cadets to Play Lake Forest Preps Today

Lake Forest academy and Kentucky Military institute of Lyndon, Ky., will clash this afternoon at Lake Forest in an intersectional prep school football game. The southerners, with a recent 13 to 6 victory over Butler frosh, have a powerful offensive built around Smith, a 220 pound back. The north shore school's team is light but fast, and boasts an unbroken string of six victories so far this season.

Gophers Play to Take Back Michigan Jug

Manders, Minnesota's sophomore full back, tips the scales at 201 pounds. The average of the Gopher backs will be 181. The comparison of the elevens shows Michigan, 185; Minnesota, 190.

Harry Kipke, who sees tomorrow's game the only bar to a championship in his second year directing the football hopes of his Alma Mater, is not worried about his line. He is worried about forward pass offense. He knows Minnesota has pointed for Michigan and that a victory over the Wolverines constitutes a successful season.

Today he watched these Gophers, without the strain of a title at stake, warm up with confident assurance. He contrasted their care free attitude with his men who labor under the handicap of the necessity of victory.

Princeton to Meet Yale in Roper's Finale

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—A great football coach, one of the historic personalities of Princeton university and of football in the east, ends his career tomorrow when Princeton's under-dog team meets Yale at Palmer stadium, Princeton, in the closing game of the Princeton season.

Bill Roper, an old grad coach who is credited with having won games over Harvard and Yale by the sheer power of his oratory to inflame dejected Princeton squads, sends his last team on the field. He is retiring to pursue his career in the law and politics in Philadelphia, and it befell that in his final year as coach the Princeton team was the least successful in the history of football at the school. Beaten by Brown, Cornell, Navy and Lehigh, a record of misfortunes without precedent in Princeton's long record on the football field, the present team comes to the climax of the season with everything to gain and a great devotion to serve, for Roper in his last and worst season has been more patient with a willing but inept squad than he was on some past occasions with better teams.

He'll Reach Heights Today.

Known for years as one of the greatest dressing room exhorters in the game, Roper, in his appeal to the team before the game and between halves, Saturday afternoon, may be expected to achieve something the like of which no other Princeton team ever heard, but there will be no record kept and the plea to the players will be private to them and Bill.

Some of the old football traditions are dying, and it may be that Roper's style of inspiration is passé, too. In days gone by, his fight talks to teams which seemed unequal to Yale and Harvard roused the players to such reckless ferocity that they couldn't be held. Half a dozen such victories over Princeton's favorite enemies were largely credited to him and, in the final game at Harvard a few years ago, Roper apparently over spoke himself, for the game was so violent that the Harvard side booed and relations were broken off.

Old Grads Are Faithful.

The fact that Princeton has lost four games and tied one, leaving only one victory and that over a minor opponent in six games, apparently exerts no influence on the old grads' interest. Special trains from New York will start rolling about eight in the morning and Palmer stadium is certain to be filled, regardless of the weather, which is likely to be damp.

A rain would do Princeton's attack no harm, but Yale naturally would prefer a dry field for the quick starts and cutbacks of Albie Booth. However, the rules now forbid the old Princeton victory play of scoring touchdowns from the fumbles of the Tigers' opponents.

Yale this year has a typical Yale team, with a powerful line, much better than Princeton's, and at least two complete back fields of first rate ability. Yet, such is the habit of apparently inferior Princeton teams in their Yale games, that the crowd will expect the unexpected. Old grads who played with victorious Princeton teams in Roper's time, and before, returned to the university the day before the game to look on at the old collegiate ceremonies, doubtful of the team's power to win this time, but, somehow, hopeful of another miracle to be wrought by the inspirational magic of Bill Roper's oratory.

MICHIGAN STATE SCHEDULES ARMY AND SYRACUSE

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Michigan State college will meet Army and Syracuse on the gridiron next fall, it was disclosed here today by the school's athletic authorities. Four major games already have been booked by the Spartans, who have suffered but one defeat this season and that by a one point margin.

The Army game will be played at West Point Oct. 10. Syracuse will be met at East Lansing Oct. 31, with a possibility that an extended athletic relationship may be established. State has been advanced on the schedule of Michigan, a traditional rival, to Nov. 17. Georgetown university, the only team to beat Michigan State so far this season, will play a return game at East Lansing Oct. 24.

A game is also to be arranged with either Colgate or the University of Detroit. The Spartans defeated Colgate here this year in one of the outstanding upsets of the year. They meet Detroit Nov. 22.

Bruins Open Cage Season Against Cleveland Nov. 26

Chicago's 1930-'31 professional basketball season will get under way at the Stadium on Nov. 26, when the Bruins make their debut against the Cleveland Rosenblums.

Fight Decisions

Retzlaff Fouls Mata to Lose in First Round

When Charley Retzlaff, Duluth heavyweight, fights, a bout is short and snappy. That's the way it was again last night at the Coliseum, but the ending hardly pleased the lanky knockout artist. With the first round almost over Retzlaff landed a low punch on Antonio Mata of Spain, and he was declared the loser on a foul.

Fans at the ringside knew the hard right to the groin was foul as soon as it landed, and the referee and judges lost no time reaching the same conclusion after Referee Davey Miller had gone through the formality of counting out the stricken boxer.

Dillon Whips Norman.

Many spectators were nettled when Miller conformed with the state boxing rules by counting over Mata, but they cheered when they learned that the foul had not been overlooked. The bout was scheduled to last six rounds.

Harry Dillon of Winnipeg and Edgar Norman of Chicago, taking the ring for the evening's finale, fought a six rounder that kept virtually all of the 3,000 who made possible gate receipts of $5,000 in their seats until the final bell. Dillon was awarded the decision. He put Norman down for a 9 count in the second round. In the final session Dillon hit the floor, but for a count of 1.

Pantaleo Stops Tassi.

In the other bouts Paul Pantaleo of Chicago scored a three round technical knockout over Nando Tassi of Italy; Walter Madey of Chicago beat Andy Shanks of Ludington, Mich., in six rounds; Tony Cancela of Tampa, Fla., whipped Jack Barry of Chicago in six rounds; Ted Rosa of Chicago stopped Joe Miller of Chicago in the second round; Marian Matuszak of Chicago and Knute Dane of Denmark drew in four rounds, and Johnny Baima shaded Karl Ogren in four sessions.

W. & J. MARTIN,

ALBION LEATHER WORKS, GLASGOW.
65 BRUNSWICK STREET,
GLASGOW, C.2.
Messrs. The Regal Shoe Co.,
Whitman.
Dear Sirs,
We beg to confirm the verbal order placed by your Representative this morning in Glasgow, covering a quantity of GENUINE SCOTCH HEATHER GRAIN.
Your Representative asks us, and we have pleasure in advising you that this leather is the same and identical in every respect to the SCOTCH HEATHER GRAIN which we supply to Messrs. Bartley & Sons, and G. W. Bunting, Ltd., of London.
Thanking you and assuring you of our best attention,
We are, Dear Sirs,
Yours truly,
W. & J. Martin

WHEN we searched England this year for the newest Styles to show you this Fall, we discovered that Bartley & Sons and G. W. Bunting Ltd., two of the most prominent Royal Bootmakers, were both using Martin's of Glasgow Scotch Heather Grain in their most popular models, which we purchased to reproduce for you.

Now there is only One Genuine Scotch Grain. There is no substitute. It is made from the finest selection of Calfskins in Europe and tanned by a secret process, known only to W. & J. Martin of Glasgow.

There was only one way to reproduce these wonderful shoes made by Bartley and Bunting,—and that was to purchase identically the same expensive Leather that they used.

And that is exactly what we did. Our representative went immediately to Glasgow to see Mr. Martin personally, and we placed orders for 200,000 square feet of the same identical tannage that he supplies the Royal Bootmakers.

It is the largest order Mr. Martin ever received. Today we own more of Martin's Genuine Scotch Grain Leather than any American Manufacturer and all of the Custom Bootmakers in England and America combined, and we are showing in our windows today, more Scotch Grain Shoes than anyone else, at any price.

If you want to see the Original $35. hand made Scotch Grain Wing tip Oxford by Bunting or the Original $30 Blucher Brogue made by Bartley, look in our windows today, and right side of each Original shoe you will see the Regal Reproduction for $6.60.

And if you step into the store, we will be glad to show you 25 other Styles made of Martin's of Glasgow Genuine Imported Scotch Grain.

E. J. Bain
President, Regal Shoe Co.

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 14.—A determined yet rather terrified Drake bulldog will arrive in town at noon tomorrow, and two hours later out at the Notre Dame stadium will be face to face with the case hardened proletarian of the Notre Dame football men.

Just how the Bulldog will look or what he will resemble after he charges into this pre-heated battle no one can predict. The Deus ex Machina, Mr. Knute Rockne, will not be at the furnace. He will be among those present in Evanston when Northwestern lines up against Wisconsin.

Hunk Anderson and two or three other analysts on the Rockne staff will be at the levers. They are reported to be even more merciless than the big fireman. So, under the irmustances, who can blame a Bulldog even though he comes from Iowa, corn fed and ready for action, for turning pale at such a situation?

Three Shifts at Call.

The heat shift of this open hearth may not function tomorrow unless the Bulldog from Iowa turns out to be extremely tough metal. Puddler Cronin and his first helpers, Carideo, Abbruzzi, and Brill, may not even have the slag removed because Melter Koken and his master mechanics raise the whole machine has got to function above its critical temperature a split later when a bunch of Wildcats from Northwestern will be aiming at a freezing point.

For this reason Cronin, Koken, Ohlmeier, and Hanley will be relied upon to start melting the Bulldog in case Savoldi, Carideo, et cetera.

Only the Notre Dame practice this afternoon 140 boys, seemingly perfect physical specimens, were put through the final rehearsal for the Drake game. And if it had not been for the long black whiskers which Savoldi was wearing even an expert couldn't have differentiated among the 22 four teams. In fact, it looked like a Detroit factory with all shifts working day and night.

30,000 to See Game.

About 30,000 Notre Dame rooters will be in the stadium when Drake takes its last normal look into the maws of those bone crushing rollers.

When Supt. Rockne at the gauges of his steel team has already melted down, crushed the Southern Methodists of Texas, puddled Carnegie Tech, taken the core out of Pitt's ingot, flattened Indiana, and jolted Penn until Poor Richard turned over in his grave.

If the Bulldog ever gets a good grip most of the 20,000 spectators will be surprised. The Canine has taken hold ominously once or twice in the past. He held on so long last year in Chicago in the annual game between the two teams that Rockne had to open the carburetor wide in order to down the Bulldog in the last quarter. The old machine percolated and the master mechanics know very well how to make it percolate again.

Trojan Coach to Scout Irish Team at Purple Game

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Howard H. Jones, head football coach at University of Southern California, today made arrangements to fly from Los Angeles to scout the Notre Dame team at Northwestern Nov. 22.

Jones will fly to Kansas City, take the overnight train to Chicago and arrive in time to get an eyeful of what his charges may expect from Carideo, Abbruzzi, Brill and Savoldi when Rockne's men tackle Southern California here on Dec. 6.

Jones already is represented in the east by his assistant coach, Aubrey Devine. Devine scouted the South Methodists in their romp over Penn at Philadelphia last week, and will also be on hand for the Drake game tomorrow.

Pitt Comes to Ohio State on Dad's Day

Columbus, O., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—A Dad's day crowd of more than 50,000 was gathering in Columbus tonight to watch Ohio State play its final home game of the 1930 season against the University of Pittsburgh tomorrow in the Ohio stadium. Despite Ohio's victory over the Navy last week, the Panthers enter the intersectional battle slight favorites.

The Pitt team arrived in Columbus tonight at 7:15 and went to the Columbus Athletic club for the night.

The Panthers hold the edge because of their early season performances, the record of Ohio State already having been smudged by defeats from Northwestern and Michigan and a tie with Wisconsin. Pitt, on the other hand, has bowed only to Notre Dame and has been tied by Nebraska.

The Buckeyes will be able to put their whole strength in the field, having recovered from the injuries which hit the first team.

Fesler will again be at full back on offense and right end on defense, besides acting as the team's captain, signal caller, punter, and passer. Six other Ohio players will take part in their last game—Larkins, Idle, Horn, Selby, Griffith, and Taylor.

BUTLER AT PURDUE

La Fayette, Ind., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—In between listening to reports from Michigan and Northwestern regarding the outcome of the two titular battles, Purdue's defending champions will take on Butler here tomorrow afternoon in a Dad's day feature. The Bulldogs are expected to be outclassed by the Boilermakers, and there is more interest in the Purple and Wolverine encounters, which will determine whether Purdue can successfully defend its title.

The game with Butler comes as a welcome relief to the Purdue squad after five straight conference games, and although Kizer intends to start his regulars, he plans to use his reserves the greater part of the game. The Boilermakers are looking forward to the closing game with Indiana and the defense of the old Oaken Bucket, and Kizer intends to take no chances on further injuries.

HAWKS MEET PENN STATE

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Under skies which threatened to dampen the University of Iowa home coming celebration, the Hawkeye football squad took a light workout today for tomorrow's game against Penn State.

A mere limbering up and a brief signal drill comprised the final Iowa practice session.

Coach Burt Ingwersen started Bud Wilier at quarter back and Kris at half back today, replacing Lloyd and Leo Jensvold. The Jensvold twins may be used in tomorrow's game, but are not likely to be in the starting lineup as the result of injuries.

The Penn State squad held a brief workout in Davenport today and will not arrive in Iowa City until early tomorrow afternoon.

Army and Navy to Meet for Charity in New York Dec. 13

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The Army today accepted Dec. 13 as the date on which it will play the Navy on a New York gridiron for charity.

Announcement that made the contest a certainty was made by Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of the military academy. It crowned with success two weeks of uncertainty and twenty-four hours in which hopes for a renewal of the service classic had risen and then had been dashed to the earth again by discovery that Navy would be unable to play on Dec. 6 because of a game with Pennsylvania, and that Army would not play on Dec. 13.

Emergency Decides Army.

With startling suddenness, however, came the decision of Gen. Smith and his Army athletic council this morning that in the national emergency objections to the Dec. 13 date had been set aside. A telegram was dispatched to Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, superintendent of the Navy academy at Annapolis, notifying him that Army had accepted the date despite its interference with midterm examinations.

Within the hour Maj. Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics at West Point, left for Washington by airplane to confer with representatives of the Naval academy about arrangements.

Agrees to Play Game.

Maj. Gen. Smith's telegram to the superintendent of the Naval academy read:

"In view of your difficulties in arranging to play on Dec. 6, as expressed in your telegram of Nov. 13, the Military academy will play the Naval academy a game of football for charity in New York City on Dec. 13; under the conditions expressed in my telegram of yesterday. The graduate manager of the Army Athletic association is leaving for Washington at once. If agreeable he will meet your athletic representative there to make arrangements.

"WILLIAM R. SMITH,
"Major General."

The Naval academy officials confirmed the fact by telephone that they will be glad to play on Dec. 13.

Only players will be admitted to the game free of charge, it was reported at West Point, and even newspaper men covering the game will be expected to purchase tickets. One hotel has offered accommodations and meals free to all teams playing charity games here this season.

The post-season contest will be the eleventh game of the season for each team. In the last meeting of the two service teams, in 1927, Army won, 14 to 9, at the Polo grounds.

Change Benefit Date

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP)—The benefit football game between the Notre Dame All-Stars, assembled by Knute Rockne, and the New York Giants of the National Football league, will be played here Sunday, Dec. 14, instead of on Dec. 13, it was announced tonight. The game was set back one day to make room for the meeting between the Army and Navy.

Air Beacons to Save Rice from Wild Geese

BY BOB BECKER.

Airplane beacons are going to be installed in the Arkansas rice fields in an effort to scare thousands of wild ducks and geese out of the fields. The birds are far too willing to help the rice farmers harvest their crops this fall. The trouble with these feathered helpers is that they carry away what they harvest and don't bring it back, with the result that the owners take it on the chin to the tune of many thousands of dollars' worth of marketable rice.

This is the first time that we have ever heard of powerful revolving beacons being used to frighten waterfowl from a certain locality. Of course the whole idea is an experiment. Possibly the lights will not drive the birds from the fields, but both farmers and the electrical experts believe that they will have the desired effect and thus give the rice crop some protection.

The farm of C. C. Cox, south of Stuttgart, Ark., has been chosen as the site of the first beacon to be put into operation. Suttgart long has been known as the center of the great duck and goose country, as countless flocks of these birds assemble in that territory each fall to feast in the rice fields.

It is believed that the light beacons will be effective from a distance of four or five miles, thus enabling groups of rice planters to get together and install one or more lights at minimum cost. The beacon which has been loaned for the experiment is the same as that used in the west by farmers for protection against coyotes.

Gene Learns He's Just a Mr. Tunney to Andover School

Andover, Mass., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Gene Tunney may be retired heavyweight champion to the rest of the world, but to Phillips Andover academy, he's just a member of the "general public" and consequently not admissable to its night-before-football dinner.

Tunney arrived here prepared to address the student body and then somebody remembered at almost the last moment that the general public is excluded.

Ray A. Graham, Roslyn, N. Y., automobile magnate, who will be Tunney's host at the game between Andover and Phillips Exeter tomorrow, got busy with the alumni, but found, after much argument, that the rules at the academy are inviolable.

Blackhawk Squad Arrives for 1st Game

Coach Dick Irvin and Physical Director Emil Iverson arrived in Chicago last night with nineteen members of the Blackhawk hockey team who will open the local hockey season at the Chicago stadium tomorrow night against their perennial foes, the New York Rangers.

"There is only one radical change in the playing code which may bother spectators tomorrow night," said Coach Irvin in commenting upon this year's changes in the National Hockey league rules.

"All they have to do is remember that, no matter how many penalties are meted out by the referees during the game, the playing strength of a team can never be below four men; that is, three men and a goaltender, except when injuries have reduced their strength to that point.

"An infraction which may keep the referees busy for a while is one which concerns reaching for and stopping a flying puck. Players other than goalers may only use their hands to stop the puck when it is coming directly at them in order to protect themselves from possible injury; otherwise they will be given a penalty. Also if a player pulls the smart trick of knocking an opponent's stick from his hand when neither player is in the play a minor penalty will be given. The so-called smart fellows aren't going to have much chance to pull their funny stuff from now on."

This year there will be five major referees and five assistant referees, with the major official having power to overrule his assistant if he deems it necessary.

MILLS AT LA GRANGE.

The Mills football team will meet the All-Suburban eleven at La Grange tomorrow.

FORMER PURPLE STARS DRILL FOR GAME WITH IRISH

Coach Dick Hanley of Northwestern and Tim Lowry, captain and center of the 1925 team, had a squad of thirty-five former stars out at Dyche stadium last night, to whip together a team to play against ex-stars of Notre Dame at Soldiers' field Thanksgiving day.

The former Wildcats and Ramblers will play the first game of the football double header arranged by Chicago Shriners for the benefit of the Chicagon unit, Shriners' Hospitals for Crippled Children. They will start their battle at 10 a. m. Regardless of the score, or the position of the teams, their game will be called at 11 a. m., to give way to Oregon State and West Virginia for a full time game, the second half of the twin bill attraction.

Notre Dame's former stars, most of whom now are coaching, will not report for practice at South Bend until Monday before Thanksgiving day. But Coach Knute Rockne asserts that all are in condition; all know their style of play, and that all they need is a little teamwork practice to put them on edge.

COAST COLLEGE ELEVENS IN ROW OVER PRO HINTS

Trojan Coach Replies to Bear Tackle's Charge.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 14.—Insinuations of professionalism in University of Southern California athletics, directed at the local school by its two chief rivals, Stanford and California, today raised the biggest coast uproar in years.

"Poor sportsmanship" was the term applied to the Stanford and California charges by Southern California partisans, of whom Head Football Coach Howard Jones gave almost the only official vote.

Jones Answers Cahn.

Jones in particular took up the remarks of Fritz Cahn, varsity tackle at the University of California, whose team was beaten by U. S. C. last Saturday, 74 to 0, and the blasts of the student editor of the Daily Californian.

Cahn spoke at a 2 a. m. athletic massmeeting on the Berkeley campus this morning and said, "We were beaten last Saturday by the best professional team in the country."

"As for Cahn," said Coach Jones tonight, "if one of my football players stayed out late at night and popped off as Cahn did, I would fire him off my team. Such a statement as Cahn's is not only ridiculously untrue but an insult to the University of Southern California. I think that California authorities owe us an immediate apology. If one of my men said a thing like that, an apology would be forthcoming.

Bears Won in 1929.

"Nothing was said about professionalism on our team last year when California beat us, 15 to 7, and we have only two new regulars this year."

Officials of the University of Southern California expressed dismay and resentment at the charges, but declined to issue statements. Dr. Hugh Willett, faculty athletic representative, said, "It is not the policy to consider a wild student rumor. If Dean Putnam, faculty representative of the University of California, has any official charges to make concerning our football men, he maydo so officially to me."

A dispatch from Berkeley quoted William Monohan, graduate manager of Athletics at California, as saying, "There is no intention of offering any complaints of professionalism. Cahn is just offside. Most of the remarks are those of excited students."

Rumor High Salary.

One rumor was wired here to the effect that Orv Mohler, alternate quarter back on Jones' team, was being paid an unduly high salary as a salesman of motor trucks. Mohler gave out a signed statement declaring that he is paid $30 for each automobile sold, and is working his way through school.

ILLINI RESERVE ELEVEN BATTLES DE PAUL TODAY

De Paul university's unbeaten football team advances on Champaign, Ill., today to battle the University of Illinois B team. De Paul is after its fifth consecutive victory of the season. Today's game will prepare the team for the intersectional encounter with the University of San Francisco next Sunday in Soldiers' field.

She was the widow of Lyman Dwight James and had been in good health until last September when she suffered a paralytic stroke.

A Teacher at $1.50 a Week.

Before her marriage in 1857 Mrs. James taught in the district school at Conway, Mass., receiving a salary of $1.50 a week, and later while a member of the faculty of the Maplewood school for girls received her first money gift from her brother, Marshall Field—a $5 bill. Fifty years later he left her $500,000.

In 1914 Mrs. James gave the town of Williamsburg a $40,000 high school and then provided a $3,000 fund for its maintenance. At that time she declared: "Any one who gives a town a better building than it could build itself should give something toward its upkeep."

Mrs. James also gave the town a fire house and a chapel and provided a $3,000 endowment fund for a room in the Dickinson hospital at Northampton.

Granddaughters Live Here.

Mrs. Field is survived by two sons, one daughter, two grandsons, four granddaughters and eleven great-grandchildren. The sons are: Phillip Lyman Jones, former of Chicago and now head of the New York branch of Marshall Field & Co., and Henry Dwight James of Hartford, Conn. The daughter is Mrs. George Mirick of Brookline, Mass.

Word of Mrs. James' death was first received in Chicago by Mrs. Marcus C. Richards of Hubbard Woods. Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Kingman Douglass of 425 East Illinois road, Lake Forest, are the only grandchildren living in the Chicago area.

Mrs. James was the aunt of Mrs. Albert A. Sprague of Chicago and of Stanley Field of Lake Bluff.

Funeral services will be held at 12:30 Monday at Mrs. James' residence in Williamsburg, and burial will be in the Williamsburg cemetery.

2 BANDITS ROB LOOP THEATER; FLEE IN CROWD

Two young bandits robbed the ticket seller at the Illinois theater of between $100 and $200 in change during the lull between the matinée and the evening performance last night.

"Lay it on the line," said the first robber as he stepped up close to the cage in the lobby and leveled a pistol at Edwin Jilbert, the cashier. Edward Appleton, another cashier, was seated inside. "Stay where you are," the gunman ordered as Jilbert pushed the change tray toward them. Then both robbers put their hands through the grating and hurriedly scooped up the change. A woman entering the lobby was knocked aside as the two fled through the door and west on Jackson boulevard in the crowds.

Rollo Timponi, business manager of the theater, had taken the afternoon's receipts to the vault a few minutes before the robbers arrived.

Charles Landis, 55 years old, 1313 South Washtenaw avenue, a painter out of work, was found asphyxiated by gas in his home last night when his wife, Anna, returned from a visit to relatives in Rockford.

OPERATE TO SAVE LIFE OF WOUNDED PREMIER OF JAPAN

Doctors Fight Blood Poisoning.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Nov. 15 (Saturday).—Baron Kijuro Shidehara, former ambassador to Washington, has been named acting premier during the absence of Premier Hamaguchi.

TOKIO, Nov. 15 [Saturday.]—(AP)—Premier Yugo Hamaguchi, wounded yesterday by a youth who shot at him in the Central railway station, was considered this morning to be in a hopeful condition after he had passed a good night with sufficient sleep. Physicians said that the patient complained of pains in the abdomen this morning, however.

A bulletin issued at 8 a. m. stated that the premier's temperature was 37.3 degrees Centigrade [about 100 degrees Fahrenheit] and his pulse 95. The statesan's mind continues clear and he has questioned nurses about his assailant.

Last night the premier stoically bore the pain of removal by surgeons of a small portion of pierced intestine. The 66 year old politician, although he had received three blood transfusions during the day in an attempt to stave off blood poisoning and peritonitis, made light of his injury and inquired solicitously concerning the welfare of a sick friend.

Police Question Assassin.

Meanwhile the police closely questioned Tomeo Sagoya, 23 year old member of the Aikokusha, or "Love of Country association," endeavoring to learn the motive for the attempted assassination. With a single shot and only six feet away, Sakoya struck down the premier and was seized by police before he could fire again.

Premier Hamaguchi won his popular title of "Warrior for Peace" in a fight of months for acceptance of the London treaty which many high naval officers and patriotic extremists asserted did not give Japan adequate sea power in comparison with the United States and Great Britain. He finally obtained ratification by Emperor Hirohito of the instrument of peace.

Fear to Remove Bullet.

The wounded statesman lay for three hours at the railroad station after he was shot early yesterday and received a blood transfusion from his son, Iwane, before it was felt safe to remove him to the Imperiol University hospital. There his secretary, Yandanji Nakajima, twice gave blood for his chief. The bullet remained imbedded in the patient's thigh, surgeons believing it was too dangerous to attempt removal immediately.

Asked whether his eldest son Takehiko should be summoned from New York, where he is employed in a bank, Premier Hamaguchi replied, "No, he has his work to do."

NURSE'S FIGHT AGAINST DEATH IS NEARLY WON

After two months' dependence on the respirator which saved her from death by paralysis of the lungs, Miss Frances McGaan, 25 years old, a nurse at St. Luke's hospital, was making a valiant fight toward her recovery yesterday. Most of the battle is already won, physicians at the hospital declared, but the nurse must overcome her fear of living away from the safety of the respirator, they said.

When Miss McGaan leaves the respirator for natural periods of breathing, she is at first able to breathe normally, then her breath comes faster and in gasps. It is then that she becomes fearful, the physicians say, and wants to return to the respirator. The young woman is placed daily in a specially constructed tub of warmed water so that she may exercise and move freely her paralyzed limbs.

LEAGUE REJECTS U. S. DEMAND FOR REAL ARMS CUT

Adopts British Plan to Limit Budgets.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Nov. 14.—America's proposal for direct limitation of war materials, munitions, and arms was rejected by the league of nations preparatory disarmament commission today when 16 states voted in favor of the British resolution, supported by France and the little entente, for limitation on military budgets.

Only Germany, Russia, and Italy voted against Lord Robert Cecil's plan. The United States, Turkey, China, Bulgaria, Sweden, and Venezuela abstained from voting.

Gen. de Marinis of Italy led the fight against the budgetary system, aiming his argument directly at France. He pointed out that reserve stocks of war material are untouched and unrestricted by this method.

French Plan Big Expenditure.

The Tardieu government's project for an expenditure of $360,000,000 accumulated through budget balances, which will be put before parliament this autumn, provides a huge sum for replenishing France's military supplies, which have been considerably drained since the war through age and obsolescence, through expediture in the Syrian and Morocco campaigns, and through sales of arms to the little entente nations.

Gen. de Marinis, Count von Bernstorff of Germany, and Maxim Litvinov of Russia warned their colleagues that a disarmament convention was useless and unacceptable unless it provided for tabulation and enumeration of stocks of war material on hand by the various governments.

The soviet envoy insisted on a vote on his amendment, providing for limitation of war material through the triple scheme of budgetary and direct enumeration accompanied by the fullest publicity on stocks constantly on hand. His amendment was rejected by 12 votes to 5. American Ambassador Hugh Gibson voted against the proposal.

Fascist Amendment Defeated.

The Fascist amendment, providing for a tabulation of reserve stocks, was also defeated, 11 votes to 9. The United States abstained.

Germany's proposal for direct limitation resulted in a tie of nine votes each, with the United States balloting in favor of the Berlin plan.

REINSTATE ZION CHIEF; CHARGES TO BE DISMISSED

Conrad A. Brune, who was suspended as chief of police of Zion City on Nov. 6 after he had been seized in a raid on the home of a woman at Long Grove, near Fox Lake, was reinstated last night on the eve of his trial this afternoon in North Chicago on a disorderly conduct charge.

Col. A. V. Smith, Lake county state's attorney, attributed the raid to a grudge against Brune by Constable George Stried, and said the charges would be dismissed. Brune has been a deacon in the Zion church for 20 years.

The woman whose home was raided is Mrs. Mamie Dehne who faces trial on a dry law charge as the result of the finding of a bottle of wine in her home.

ANNO

HOW WOULD YOU VOTE TO HELP BANISH BLUES?

Ballot on Confidence Is Proposed.

BY O. A. MATHER.

How do you feel about your own affairs and those of the United States? Business, whether booming or in the dumps, is largely a matter of mass psychology. So it may not be amiss to take stock of ourselves during the present depression. And perhaps as good a way as any is to follow an outline originated by John Burnham & Co., Chicago investment bankers.

It is in the form of a ballot, with the heading: "Get out your pencil and answer these questions conscientiously for yourself—yes or no. You will be surprised." And here are the chief questions propounded:

"Have you faith in yourself and in your ability to prosper? Have you a well anchored faith in this country's future progress? Has this country progressed consistently over the last 50 years? Has it prospered in spite of intermediate recessions? Did industry rise to greater heights following each recession? Has this nation lost its ability to rise above present conditions? Can you recall one fundamental industry that has vanished in the last 15 years?

Other Questions.

"Are you right now making a definite and heroic contribution to returning normalcy? Are you resting on the oars, waiting for some one else to do it? Do you comprehend the fact that many securities are not now selling on values but at prices reflecting financial distress, unreasonable fear, and ignorance? Did the man with vision who bought sound securities in 1907-'14 or 1920 make a profit? Should you be searching out opportunities for yourself right now?"

And this little ballot concludes: "These pertinent questions, which we first asked ourselves and answered frankly, are passed along for each person to ask of himself and answer for himself—by himself. We expect no reply."

Note Better Sentiment.

Not much change in general conditions in trade and industry has taken place this week, according to the weekly mercantile reviews. However, they note that sentiment and fundamental conditions have provided a more cheerful tone in the commercial world.

"Half of November has passed without really significant change from the business trends of the earlier months," Dunn's review says, "but some of the news of the present week had a more cheering tone. The facts of a major commercial recession remain prominent and the probability of only a slow recovery is now generally recognized. Yet even scattered indications of betterment strike an encouraging note.

Influence Spreads.

"The rise in the price of copper has been the outstanding feature and its influence has spread to other channels. There are signs that prices for several important commodities have reached a point of resistance, among them being steel products, rubber and sugar. A steadying of prices, extending over a wider field, would have a large bearing on the general situation."

"Trade and industrial reports display rather more irregularity, with the influence of improved speculative feeling in the markets for securities and several important staples contrasting somewhat with spotty reports as to trade distribution proper and evidences of further seasonal recessions in several industries," Bradstreet's review says. "In ordinary wholesale and retail trade, too, there are evidences of cross currents which render characterization difficult."

Failures Increase.

Business failures this week were placed at 495, compared with 489 for five days last week and 404 for the corresponding week in 1929. Bank clearings were estimated at $8,544,562,000, a decrease of 41.4 per cent from a year ago when the stock market was in the final throes of liquidation.

Building construction reports make a better showing. The F. W. Dodge corporation places contracts awarded in the week ended Nov. 7 at $67,113,100, or at the rate of $13,422,600 per business day, compared with a daily rate of $12,973,100 in October, and $15,640,800 in November, 1929.

Lamont Holds Speculation Responsible for Slack Business

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., tonight blamed "rampant speculation" in America, artificial price stimulation, overproduction, and political unrest as the chief causes of world-wide business depression.

Assailing the recent tariff increase as being badly timed, he analyzed bad business at the closing session of the annual meeting of the Academy of Political Science in the Hotel Astor.

"We must not try to overstimulate ailing business with nitro-glycerine pills," he said. "For if we do, we may have further explosions."

Young Plan Praised.

Most of the morning, afternoon and evening sessions were taken up by comments of speakers of international note in praise of operation of the Young plan, which succeeded the Dawes plan for effecting world war reparations settlements.

Gates W. McGarrah, president of the Bank for International Settlements, said that the existence of this new bank at Basle, Switzerland, is a stabilizing and reassuring factor in the present "tense world situation." He told of a survey being made to determine the possibility of a system of clearing international movements of capital.

Banker Lists Causes.

Mr. Lamont, who was alternate member of the committee of experts on reparations last year in drawing up the Young plan, gave an analysis of the world-wide "phenomenon" of depression, ascribing present conditions to the following causes:

"1. The production outrunning consumption, not only in many basic commodities, but also in many manufactured products.

"2. In part to the effort made to hold up commodity prices artificially. When prices for such commodities finally gave way, the severity of the business collapse was accentuated.

"3. To the fall in the price of silver and thus in the purchasing power of perhaps one-quarter of the world's population as represented by India and China.

"4. To a shifting, on an almost unprecedented scale, of gold holdings. Thus, from the beginning of 1929 to date, the Bank of France and the federal reserve banks of America have increased their gold reserves approximately one billion 200 million dollars, a large part of this being drawn from the central bank reserves of other countries.

"5. To current political unrest in India, China and South America.

"6. In certain countries, especially America, to a spirit of rampant speculation. For some years many people lost interest in investing their money in good bonds, returning a fair rate of interest. They have wanted quick speculative profits, with the inevitable result that everybody knows."

Tariff Law Assailed.

Speaking on "phases of the world depression," Mrs. Lamont asserted that the enactment of the Smoot-Hawley tariff had come at a most inopportune time and had resulted in ill will and dismay abroad, as well as uncertainties and dislocations to both our internal and external trade. However, he maintained that it would be easy to magnify the ill effects of the act and said that how serious its results would be could not yet be determined.

Holding that exaggerated swings of the business cycle are due to unreasonable overconfidence in boom periods and equally unjustified pessimism during depressions, Mr. Lamont declared that extreme pessimism at this time was as uncalled for as were some of the high hopes of fourteen months ago.

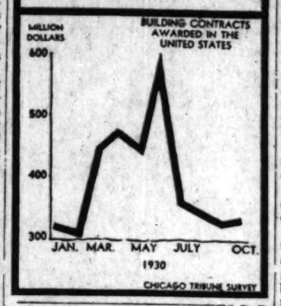
Worst Over, He Believes.

Expressing the hope that we are now at the low point of the cycle, Mr. Lamont declared that there was no reason for misgivings as to the ability of the country to come through it.

"Not only shall we win through, but we are winning through," he declared. "The process is already under way."

"The outstandin : need at the present time is for patience and courage," he continued. "Our economic, banking and financial systems are all better of than in past depressions." Mr. Lamont suggested that revision of our "somewhat antiquated anti-trust laws" would be helpful.

Building Contracts Turned Slightly Upward in October Following Persistent Decline



DOMESTIC PRICE OF COPPER METAL IS MARKED UP TO 12C

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 14.—With leaders of the industry concentrating on the curtailment program announced on Thursday, the copper market responded again today in lively fashion, with the metal selling in some instances as high as 12 cents a pound.

The proposal to restrict copper production throughout the world to the level of consumptive demand aroused widespread interest in Wall street, where the various features of the plan were carefully studied. Copper executives and bankers interested in the copper industry were of the opinion that the suggested curb could be enforced by voluntary agreement, as contemplated, and that the output of the mines can be reduced to the extent of 20,000 tons a month without any great difficulty.

The further stiffening in the price structure yesterday caused no surprise. Such business as was transacted at 12 cents a pound was for immediate delivery. Before the current advance got under way the metal was selling at 9½ cents a pound.

Prices in the foreign markets were steadier, with quotations advanced only ½ cent a pound to 10.80 c. i. f. London, Havre, and Hamburg. This is equivalent to 10½ cents a pound domestic delivery and a further advance in export prices must be made if the domestic and foreign markets are kept on a parity. As a result of the present disparity, a moderately heavy volume of copper was sold for export today, sales of about 6,750,000 pounds being reported for the forenoon, against 9,000,000 pounds for the full day Thursday.

As a result of the curtailment plan several of the smaller copper consumers were said to be active buyers in the domestic market today, while the larger users were said to be buying cautiously.

Chrysler Cuts Quarterly Dividend Rate to 25 Cts.

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Directors of the Chrysler corporation today reduced the quarterly dividend to 25 cents a share, compared with 75 cents previously paid.

A statement by Walter P. Chrysler, accompanying the dividend announcement, said: "Notwithstanding a strong and liquid financial position and surplus disclosed, your directors feel that the uncertainties attendant upon the immediate future of the business dictate, as a matter of prudence, the modification of the corporation's dividend policy, and the fourth quarter payment has been cut to 25 cents a share, payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 1.

"This conservative action has been taken with a view to affording the stockholders' interests the maximum protection through the conservation by the corporation of its resources, pending definite indications that business conditions have really turned the corner.

Cites Operating Policy.

"The important consideration during such times as these is to keep open the channels of trade and maintain intact a distributing system capable of taking advantage of improved business conditions when they arrive. This consideration has determined the recent operating policy of the management."

The corporation reported for the third quarter net loss of $916,108, against net profit of $6,635,179, equal to $1.49 a share, in the third quarter of 1929. In the June quarter this year the corporation had net profit of $3,228,139, which lacked 2 cents of meeting the dividend requirements for the quarter. In the March quarter this year the corporation earned 4 cents a share.

The statement showed accumulated net profit for the year to Sept. 30 of $2,492,747. Surplus as of Sept. 30 was $49,322,549, after payment of dividends this year amounting to $9,961,812. The net decrease in surplus for the nine months was $7,469,064.

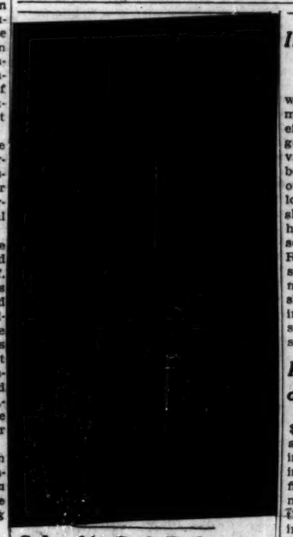
The report showed that inventories had been reduced this year $10,652,524 and that gross expenditures on permanent assets for 1930 thus far amounted to $7,353,072, compared with $19,966,309 for the first nine months of last year.

Plan $4 Payment.

Frederick M. Small, president of the Martin-Parry corporation, states in a letter to stockholders that as soon as settlement for the Indianapolis plant has been made by the General Motors corporation, directors feel that they will be able to make a distribution to stockholders of $4 a share, retaining sufficient cash for the operation of the windshield business at the York, Pa., plant.

The Ford Motor company of Canada, Ltd., declared a semi-annual dividend of 60 cents a share. This makes a total disbursement of $2.10 a share for 1930, the company having paid $1.20 plus 30 cents extra a share on June 23. Theoretically the June dividend covered the first half of 1930 and the last half of 1929.

American Utilities and General corporation declared a dividend of 5 cents a share on its B stock, on which 10 cents previously had been paid. The regular dividends were declared on other stocks of the company. The Standard Public Service corporation has omitted the 2 per cent stock dividend on the class A participating preferred stock.



Columbia G. & E. Quarter Balance Totals $2,216,534

New York, Nov. 14.—(AP)—Columbia Gas and Electric corporation today reported for the three months ended Sept. 30 a balance applicable to capital stock of the corporation of $2,216,534, compared with $3,688,641 in the like quarter last year. Philip G. Gossler, president, pointed out that as the oil and gasoline properties of the Columbia system had been segregated as of Jan. 1 last, the statement did not include the earnings from those properties since that date, but did include dividends declared on preferred stocks of Columbia Oil and Gasoline corporation.

Indian Summer Weather Weakens Meat Demands

Rather warm weather tended to weaken the demand for most leading meat lines. On the other hand, foreign business continued on a very good, broad basis, says the weekly review of Armour & Co. Demand for beef was curtailed by the fact that other meats were selling relatively lower. Fresh pork selling prices showed sharp declines. Smoked meats, however, moved fairly well in most sections at generally unchanged prices. Receipts of sheep and lambs were slightly heavier. Dressed trade in most leading markets was extremely slow at lower prices, with sellers finding difficulty in cleaning up available supplies. Dressed veal trade was spotty, the review reports.

Report $75,000,000 Merger of Limestone Firms Brewing

It was reported last night that a $75,000,000 merger involving the Indiana Limestone company, the Bloomington Limestone company and several independent firms is impending. Officials of the Indiana Limestone could not be reached last night to confirm the report. A dispatch from Bloomington, Ind., said that an audit has been completed of all the quarries and mills of the companies figuring in the merger. More than 50 separate plants would be involved in the deal if consummated. The advantage of the consolidation, it is said, would be an end of the price cutting in the Bloomington-Bedford district.

HEAD OF RAILWAY SECURITY OWNERS RAPS 6 HOUR DAY

If a definite program seeking to obtain through federal legislation a six hour day without reduction in pay evolves from the present conference of railway trainmen's unions, it will meet with the opposition of railroad owners.

This was indicated last night when the general chairmen of the rail unions, who are considering means of relieving railroad unemployment, received a telegram from Milton W. Harrison, president of the national association of owners of railroad and public securities.

Charging that a six hour day with eight hour compensation is impracticable, Mr. Harrison made a counter suggestion that present working trainmen reduce their working time to 26 days a month. He said that if the 350,000 men now employed would make such a concession, 75,000 additional men would be put to work. "Such a course will alleviate unemployment and will merit the approval of the public in the future when prosperity has returned," the telegram said.

HARRIS TRUST SYNDICATE GETS SCHOOL BONDS

City Controller Schmidt yesterday sold the $12,500,000 working cash fund bond issue of the board of education to a syndicate of banks headed by the Harris Trust and Savings bank, the highest of three bidders. The bonds represent one-half of the working cash fund established for the school board in the financial relief legislation passed at the special session of the general assembly.

The price paid for the bonds, which bear 4 per cent interest, was 98.847, which realized the school board $12,355,963. This price is higher than the city received on its issue of $12,900,000 for the same purpose and the price received by the county on its $6,900,000 issue. The city obtained a price of 98.441 and the county a price of 97.6.

FINANCIAL NOTES

A permit to organize the Banco di Napoli Trust company of Chicago has been issued by the state auditor. The bank, when organized, will be located at 910 South Halsted street. The authorized capital stock will consist of 3,000 shares of a par value of $100 per share.

The city of Philadelphia on Dec. 15 will market an issue of $15,000,000 4 per cent or 4½ per cent bonds maturing in fifty years and callable after twenty years.

A. & P. STORES' OCTOBER SALES ARE $100,960,189

Sales of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company in October declined nearly 5 per cent, totaling $100,960,189, as compared with $105,995,108 in October last year.

Sales for the ten months ended Oct. 31 showed an advance of 5.16 per cent. The total for the period was $901,129,179, against $856,940,565 in the first ten months of 1929. The actual quantity of goods sold in the ten months was 4,355,653 tons, compared with 3,785,376 in the corresponding period last year. This represented a gain of 27,251 tons, or 15.06 per cent. October tonnage was 5.32 per cent ahead of last year.

Jewel Tea company yesterday reported sales of the four weeks ended Nov. 1 of $1,158,230, as compared with $1,330,338 in the parallel weeks of 1929, a decline of 12.94 per cent. The average number of sales routes in 1930 was 1,265 and in 1929 was 1,194. Sales for the first forty-four weeks of 1930 totaled $13,037,420, against $13,998,335 in the same weeks last year, a shrinkage of 6.86 per cent.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

A Chicago broker, who generally goes to Florida in winter time and who was threatened with the blues and thought of canceling his southern trip this year, has received a letter from a New York friend which he has circularized among his customers. The cheering letter is entitled: "From a Friend to a Friend." It says:

"Don't let the 'bogy man' get you. You have lived over sixty years as an optimist. Keep it up even though you appear to be alone. Never look back. The past is all behind us. All the good things are in front of us, including the Happy Hereafter.

"Some one has got to go south for the winter. Our prosperity is based upon expenditure. Poor circulation is one of the chief factors in the present situation, and I think you should go about living your life as usual with the feeling in your heart that "Happy Days Are Here Again." No one can sing that song better than you, or with quite as much feeling. Don't lose the spirit.

"As to the future I think it is full of good prospects for those who are willing to work. I don't think we'll see easy times or marvelous bull markets, but 120,000,000 people have requirements. They must be served. We are prepared to do our share, and I actually think we are on the up swing."

Secretary Mellon of the treasury department announced yesterday that the $125,000,000 issue of treasury bills to mature in three months, offered Monday, had been oversubscribed by more than $440,000,000. The bills, dated Nov. 17, will mature on Feb. 16. The highest bid received was 99.805, equivalent to an interest rate of about 1.56 per cent on an annual basis. The lowest bid accepted was 99.753, equivalent to an interest rate of about 1.75 per cent. Bids totaling $127,455,000 were accepted. Bids received totaled $568,000,000.

Consumption of crude rubber by United States manufacturers in October totaled 27,271 tons, an increase of 8 per cent over September, the Rubber Manufacturers' association reports. In previous years there has been virtually no change in the consumption for October as compared with September.

Revenue of electric light and power companies in the country as a whole for the first nine months this year was well in excess of income reported in the same period last year, Electrical World says. The total for all energy sales for the three quarters aggregated $1,548,490,000, a gain of 3 per cent.

An additional order for 500 tons of concrete bars for the new Buffalo assembly plant of Ford Motors company has been awarded to the Truscon Steel company. A previous order for the same construction called for 1,000 tons.

Production of 72,600,000 automobile tires in 1931, compared wit han estimated 56,000,000 in 1930 and 74,600,000 in 1929, is forecast by the Alexander Hamilton institute. Three factors enter into this estimate: new cars, exports, and replacements. On the basis of an expected 4,500,000 new cars in 1931, as compared with an estimated 3,500,000 cars in 1930, tire requirements for new cars, on the basis of five tires per car, should total 22,500,000. Exports, with a 5 per cent increase, would total 2,500,000.

October oil burner sales of the Timken-Detroit company showed an increase of 66⅔ per cent over sales for the corresponding period of 1929, according to Haldeman Finnie, vice president and general manager.

The Peerless Motor Car corporation has started production on full time schedule after several weeks of curtailed operations. Approximately 500 men have been added to the pay roll.

The Ford airplane factory has been placed on a twenty-four hour a day working schedule, with bookings of over $750,000 on hand and more business in prospect.

Cotton consumed during October was reported today by the census bureau to have totaled 444,494 bales of lint and 46,176 of linters, compared with 394,321 of lint and 62,798 of linters in September this year, and 639,759 of lint and 82,912 of linters in October last year.

The Burlington railroad shops at Plattsmouth, Neb., which have been on a five and one-half day schedule, have gone on a six day schedule.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 14.—The stock market was able to face forward once again today. It was the fourth successive session of the run of higher prices and it caused a lot of ordinarily hard headed folk to imagine they could discern traces of a rainbow in the sky above Wall street this afternoon.

A note of increasing caution was noticeable in the refrain of today's dealings, however, indicating a fear in some quarters that the advance might not go so very much farther without pausing for a shake out and to get its bearings once more.

There is usually a spell of selling about this stage of a rally following a prolonged advance, and with the business situation what it is, experts agree that enthusiasts who bank too strongly on a "miracle" market just now are liable to get their fingers burnt. Stability for a while rather than any prolonged or rapid advance in prices is what most operators on the constructive side are hoping for.

Not So Generous.

Hence—and wherefore—trading was not so heavy today as it was yesterday or the day before and the upturns were not so generously distributed nor so pronounced. A scattering of specialties displayed particular strength for one reason or another but the advance on the whole toned down to a much more measured stride.

Copper shares continued to set a good example for the rest of the list but their strength was more than matched by fast steppers in several other groups, particularly in the rails and public utilities. Union Pacific set off a shower of sparks in the late trading, advancing 5¼ and New York Central, Atcaison, Baltimore and Ohio and several other seasoned dividend payers improved their standings to the extent of 1 to 2 points or more. Support given the Van Sweringen issues, which have been lagging behind the procession for days, had a beneficial effect on the whole group.

Highest Priced Issue.

In the utilities group, Peoples Gas powdered its nose once more and moved up to 213½ points, making it far and away the highest priced stock on the list. Allied Chemical got safely above the 200 point line once more and with the reëntry of Norfolk and Western some days ago the exclusive group now boasts a membership of three. Atchison has been trying a comeback, the going being pretty rough now and then for this oldtimer. Railroad times are now what they once were.

The action of Consolidated Gas suggested the position of shorts in that stock were not any too comfortable, throughout the day it was apparent that nearby offerings of the stock were scant. At any rate, potential buyers were seemingly forced to bid quite briskly in order to bring out anything in the way of offerings. Selling ex-dividend the stock displayed pronounced strength from the opening. The amount of the dividend deducted at the opening was quickly made up and the stock continued in steady demand at advancing levels, moving ahead for a net gain of some 3½ points to show a recovery, allowing for today's dividend, of some 13 points from the recent low of 81⅝.

Coppers Improve.

All the red metal shares counted themselves in on today's drive. Even Andes, the black sheep of yesterday's rally, tuning in for a net gain of nearly 3 points. Anaconda, Kennecott, Inspiration, Cerro de Pasco, Granby Mines, Miami, in fact the whole lot, bettered their position 1 to more than 4 points. Not since the days of 18 and 24 cent copper, some two years ago, have these shares enjoyed the prominence marketwise which is theirs at the moment. The fact that surplus stocks on hand in the western half of the world, totaling 665,000 tons at the end of October, were the largest in years seems to matter now a whit with the followers of these erstwhile lowly issues.

CHICAGO STOCK LIST DISPLAYS MORE STRENGTH

Gypsum and Great Lakes Dredge Up Sharply.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Sharp upturns in the prices of the common stocks of United States Gypsum and Great Lakes Dredge and Dock featured trading on the Chicago exchange yesterday. The session was otherwise marked by general strength throughout the list and continued heavy volume of transactions in the leading utility shares.

Gypsum common was bid up three points, reflecting reports that the company is planning further expansion in the near future. Acquisition of another firm was said to be imminent. Coupled with this was anticipation of early listing on the New York exchange and reflection of the recent extra dividend.

Great Lakes Dredge Rumors.

The movement in Great Lakes Dredge was accompanied by rumors that directors will follow the example set by the Gypsum and authorize a special dividend for stockholders. The upturn carried the issue to 24, representing a net gain for the day of 3¼.

Trading in the utilities centered in Middle West, Cities Service, and Insull utility. The latter forged ahead to 3⅝ and Middle West marched up to 1⅝ on sales exceeding 45,000 shares. Cities Service earned a fraction selling ex-dividend.

Price changes elsewhere in the list were largely fractional. U. S. Radio distinguished itself by moving up to 7¼ on fairly brisk trade. On slow trade Grigsby added a fraction to 4 and Majestic eased to 9⅝.

Vortex Earns $713,639.

The annual report of the Vortex Cup company issued yesterday affords a relief to general character of reports made this year. The company showed net profit for the year ended Sept. 30 of $713,639, equivalent after preferred dividends to $5.01 a share on the outstanding common stock. An exact comparison of earnings is not possible because of a change in the company fiscal year. In the first nine months of 1929 the company reported net of $616,621, while in the twelve months ended Sept. 30, 1929, net income amounted to $653,670, or $4.44 a share.

Consumers company directors yesterday authorized the extension of the voting trust certificate purchase warrants from Jan. 1, 1931, to Jan. 1, 1933. A plan for the issuance of 1,468,200 shares of common stock was also approved. The shares will be offered to holders of common stock of record Nov. 21 at $5 a share in the ratio of one new shares for each share held. Rights expire Dec. 31, and any stocks not taken by stockholders may be sold by the president for not less than $5 a share.

Defer Preferred Dividend.

Directors deferred the dividend on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock which is payable Feb. 20, 1931. The quarterly payment on the 6 per cent preferred was authorized. Consumers common is currently selling around 3½.

Upon approval of the merger of Addressograph International corporation and the American Multigraph company by stockholders of the latter, stockholders of Addressograph will receive a dividend of about 15.3 per cent of common stock on the common. The dividend will be paid before completion of the merger and will accrue to stockholders of Addressograph only. American Multigraph stockholders not participating in the dividend. The purpose of the distribution is believed to be for the adjustment of equities of the two companies

Top yesterday, $7.90; average, $6.85.
Receipts at Chicago for today estimated at 500 cattle, 16,000 hogs, and 1,000 sheep.

Cattle sold slowly on yesterday's market at the week's sharp decline, while lambs sank to new low levels, the bulk of fat stock bringing the lowest prices in more than 16 years. Hogs reacted after a steady to 10c lower opening, with closing sales 5@10c above the low spot of Thursday's market.

The supply of hogs cleared quickly at strong prices in mid-session and later, only 2,000 remaining in the pens at the close, the high point of the day. The extreme top for weighty hogs stopped at $8.70, while pigs sold at $8.75, no criterion of the general market.

The general average held steady at $8.50. Packers were eager to buy around $8.50, but had to pay $8.55@ 8.60 for a big proportion of the kinds that sold at $8.50 and slightly below late Thursday. The range of prices reached the narrowest point since last May, the top and average being only 50c apart. Prices are still 50@75c below the close of last week.

Hog Futures Active.

The volume of business transacted on the hog futures market yesterday equaled the largest for one day since Sept. 26. Prices were firm, with most buyers showing a preference for January contracts at $8.50@8.60. Light weights for next January sold at $8.60, while mediums for the last half of that month brought $8.50, and heavy grades for the first half of January sold at $8.60.

December mediums for the last half of the month brought $8.50, while $8.90 was paid for March mediums for delivery the last half of that month, and $8.85 for deliveries during the first half of March. Heavy grades for next Monday's delivery were bid $8.60 on the "to arrive" market.

Buyers obtained yesterday's meager supply of 1,500 cattle at the recent sharp decline. Three steers and heifers averaging 693 lbs sold at $12.00, while a lot of seven averaging 805 lbs brought $11.50. The top for full loads stopped at $10.35, although some that were eligible to more were being held off the market in hopes of more satisfactory bids during the first half of next week. Butcher stock moved slowly at the week's 50c@$1.00 loss. Calves were scarce and unchanged.

Lambs Drop Below $8.00.

For the second time since before the world war top lambs have sold below the $8.00 line. Fancy "sorts" to city butchers brought $7.90 on yesterday's market, while packers refused to pass $7.75 and obtained the bulk of good grades of slaughter lambs at $7.25@ 7.50.

Additional declines in the wholesale market for fresh lambs limited the buying power of local houses. Aged sheep were scarce and unchanged, while yearlings ruled weak to 25c lower. Breeding lambs sold steady.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 500 cattle, 16,000 hogs, and 1,000 sheep, against 222 cattle, 31,825 hogs, and 1,354 sheep the previous Saturday, and 279 cattle, 12,998 hogs, and 5,993 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs at Chicago for next Monday are estimated from 48,000 to 60,000. S. Lund marked 60,000; W. C. White, 59,000; J. M. Waters and E. S. Waterbury, 57,000; F. Knutsen, 56,000; F. M. Sherwood, H. Pattison, and G. W. Chandler, 55,000; A. W. Trotter, 54,000; F. W. Young, 53,000; C. Southwick, R. B. Ellis, and W. G. Olson, 50,000, and J. T. Brown, 48,000.

HEAVY BUYING OF DEC. WHEAT AT 73C IN EVIDENCE

Trade Credits Farm Board Agencies for It.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

What appeared to be almost unlimited buying orders for December wheat at 73c were in evidence on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. The trade generally was inclined to credit the buying to farm board agencies. But wherever they came from they were effective in preventing a semi-demoralized condition from developing here as prevailed at Winnipeg toward the last where stop loss orders were uncovered in profusion. December there dropped to a low of 62¾c, the lowest price known, and closed ¼c above that figure, or 10¾c under Chicago.

There also appeared to be free buying of December wheat at Kansas City at 66½c, as that market paid little attention to the weakness in the northwest. Deferred delliveries in all markets were weak, and while old December in Chicago was off only ½c for the day, closing at 73⅛@73⅜c, the distant months were 1⅝@2c lower with March at 74⅛@74¾c; May, 75⅝@75¾c, and July, 76@76¼c. Winnipeg closed 3⅝@3½c lower, with December at 63⅝c, while Minneapolis lost 2¼c and Duluth 2⅞@3¼c.

Liverpool weakened on the diversion of Argentine cargoes of wheat to that market and dropped ⅝@1¾d to a new low for the season. Buenos Aires was off 1⅛@1½c.

Wheat Trade Puzzled.

Wheat traders were greatly puzzled over the cause of the aggressive buying of the December future here which narrowed the spread to around 2¼c under the May, while the carrying charge on the cash grain would be around 5¼c for the period. There was buying of December against sales of the deferred deliveries by commission houses, while cash interests which recently changed over hedges from the December into the May around 6@6½c difference, bought the May and sold the December, making a good profit on the transaction and are expected to deliver the cash grain.

There was some talk to the effect that the buying of wheat futures was a reflection of export business in some position, but operators who had the story said it was only a guess. It is understood that there was heavy buying of futures in Chicago to close spreads with Winnipeg, which in part accounted for the drastic decline coming in the last quarter toward the close.

Winnipeg messages in accounting for the break in wheat in that market said it was due to liquidation on the disappointing export demand and selling by spreaders who had become frightened over the reports that the farm board agencies were buying in Chicago. The only export business actually disclosed during the day was 250,000 bu Manitobas from the seaboard.

Buying against bids was a factor in checking the decline in the deferred deliveries of wheat here, while sellers of bids were forced to protect themselves at Winnipeg. No attention was paid during the day to reports of rain in Argentina, or to claims that rust was being found in all provinces.

Corn Prices Off Sharply.

Corn showed fair resistance to pressure early. At times there was aggressive buying by local bulls, but the market weakened sharply toward the last with stop loss orders uncovered. The finish was at the bottom with net losses of 1⅝@2⅜c. Outs followed December closed at 71¾@72c; March, 74½c; May, 76⅛@76⅜c; and July, 77¼c.

Some operators said they saw evidence of selling of corn against purchases of wheat to close spreads. Basis on new white corn dropped 4@5c as compared with the December, but there was little change shown in mixed and yellow with shipping sales of 67,000 bu. Unfavorable weather over the belt is expected to continue for several days, but failed to have any effect on the market. Buenos Aires closed ¼o higher to ⅝c lower.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

While there were persistent intimations of a liberal export business having been put through in wheat, partly at the Pacific coast, the seaboard reported only 250,000 bu Manitobas sold in all positions. No. 1 hard at the gulf was quoted ..t 3c over Chicago December for nearby loading.

Local handlers sold 10,000 bu wheat; 67,000 bu corn; 38,000 bu oats and 20,000 bu rye to the domestic trade with 28,000 bu corn booked to arrive.

Basis on cash oats was steady to ¼c higher with No. 2 white, ⅛@¾c over and No. 3 white, ¼c over to ¼c under December. No. 2 rye was nominally 2@10c over December.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Friday: Wheat, 7 cars; corn, 156 cars; oats, 18 cars; barley, 2 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment in the wheat trade is bearish. Reports from the southwest and Winnipeg regarding the positions of pools create uneasiness among the trade in general, which is not allayed by the action of the Grain Stabilization and other government subsidiaries. That the farm board will take delivery of 10,000,000 bu of wheat on December contracts is certain and elevator people who had changed their hedges from December to May at around 5¾ to 6¼c have been busy for several days changing them back. One elevator man announced at the close that he would deliver his cash wheat, estimated around 2,000,000 bu, on December sales, there being a profit of 4½c in changing back the spread.

The question as to whether the Grain Stabilization corporation will take delivery of the wheat not in public elevators in Chicago is worrying the traders more than it is the officials of the government's corporation. The latter might easily arrange with the private elevator interests who have December wheat sold to take delivery of the grain in private elevators rather than on track. Reports from the northwest indicate that there will be a considerable movement of wheat from Minneapolis and Duluth to Chicago. Low rail and lake rates can be obtained on wheat from Minneapolis to Duluth, while Duluth can ship the wheat to Chicago at a lake rate of 2½c per bu.

Fortunately obtained a carload of these radios at a favorable price, and that enabled us to make this sensational offer in order to help cut down our used car stock.
